FASCIST REVOLUTION THREATENS LISBON

GERMAN REQUEST FOR AIR POLICE

Britain Refuses to Sell Machines

London, July 26.
Replying to a question in the Commons to-day, Captain Eden said that German Air Minister expressed to the British Air Attache in Berlin on 15th July, his desire to purchase from 25 to 50 British aircraft for police purposes. The British Charge D'Affaires in Berlin informed the German Government yesterday that His Majesty's Government could not countenance the sale of British aircraft to the German Government for purposes forbidden by Paris Air Agreement.—British Wireless.

BRITISH EMBASSY IN CHINA

SUGGESTION ONCE AGAIN MADE

A SNUB FOR THE PROPOSER

London, July 26.
The suggestion which has been made frequently in the last few years that the British Legation in China should be raised to the status of an Embassy, was again made in the House of Commons to-day.

The proposal to this end was made by Sir Nairne Sandeman, who asked the Foreign Secretary to consider it from the viewpoint of the necessity for Britain to be represented in China by a diplomat with the necessary experience and seniority. Captain Anthony Eden, the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, told Sir Nairne Sandeman that Sir John Simon was quite satisfied that Britain would continue to be very satisfactorily represented in China without taking the step suggested.—Reuter.

WOMAN'S NARROW ESCAPE

UNDER HORSES' HOOF AT FERRY

A Chinese woman had a narrow escape from serious injury outside the Star Ferry, Kowloon, at about nine o'clock this morning when, after being knocked down by an Army mule cart, she fell beneath the horses' hoofs.

The cart was proceeding in the direction of Kowloon wharf and the horses were apparently frightened by a passing bus. They reared and knocked down the woman who was passing in front of them at the time. The driver managed to pull the horses up in the nick of time and the woman escaped with a few bruises.

CAPITAL LIKE AN ARMED CAMP

MADRID, JULY 27.
A REVOLUTIONARY OUTBREAK IN PORTUGAL IS BELIEVED TO BE IMMINENT. A NUMBER OF ARMY REGIMENTS ARE REPORTED TO BE DISAFFECTED AND TO BE COMBINING WITH A FASCIST ORGANISATION FOR THE OVERTHROW OF THE GOVERNMENT.

Startling reports are reaching Spain from Lisbon suggesting that a serious clash may occur in the Portuguese capital, which to-day presents the appearance of a city under siege.

According to Lisbon messages, five regiments from Lisbon and others from Oporto have declared their disagreement with the nomination of Captain Gomez as the Minister of the Interior. These regiments are supported by the Portuguese Fascists.

The Government have ordered the loyal military and the police to occupy all strategic points in Lisbon, while the Premier, Senor Salazar, is sleeping at the barracks of the First Machine-Gun Regiment.

The Republican Guards have given their support to the Government.—Reuter.

INTERESTING POINTS IN REPORT

The splendid work being carried out by the Alice Memorial and Affiliated Hospitals, Hongkong, is evidenced in the statistics appearing in the report of the medical Superintendent, Dr. R. M. Gibson, for the past year, which show that there were 2,146 in-patients compared with 1,936 in 1931, while the total attendances of out-patients numbered 13,032.

The annual meeting of the Hospitals is to be held this afternoon when the Superintendent's report will be submitted for confirmation. In this report an interesting point is mentioned—that a protest should be raised against the custom of refusing to consult a doctor during Chinese New Year. "While it is true that the incidence of certain diseases is influenced by climatic conditions," says Dr. Gibson, "there is no evidence that for two weeks every year when Chinese New Year Festivities are held, the natural course of a disease is in any respects different from usual. And yet, as New Year approaches, patients who have been making good progress are taken out of hospital, others requiring treatment refuse to come to hospital, so that they may be in their own homes during the festivities. When the time during which it is unlucky to be seen by a doctor has passed, the clinics are again well attended. Referring only to prevalent condition, e.g., bronchopneumonia, acute septic disease of the hand, acute abdominal disease, neglect of early treatment is disastrous at any time of the year and the New Year does not confer any immunity. Many prejudices have been overcome and we look to those of influence to educate the people to realise that no days in the calendar are lucky or unlucky as regards the onset of disease and that even during Chinese New Year it is their duty to seek the advice of a doctor, when circumstances demand medical treatment." The report adds that the

WORLD'S LARGEST DOCK

DECLARED OPEN BY KING HIS MAJESTY'S SPEECH

London, July 26.
The King opened the world's largest graving dock at Southampton to-day. The Queen, and the Duke, and Duchess of York accompanied him in the Royal Yacht "Victoria and Albert" whose bows broke a red, white and blue ribbon across the entrance as it entered the flower strewn waters of the dock to the accompaniment of cheering crowds and the music of massed bands, while overhead aeroplanes circled.

In declaring the dock open, the King expressed special satisfaction in inaugurating such a splendid addition to the dock system of the port.

GOOD AUGURY.

"It is as true to-day as ever, that the welfare of this country is largely bound by the prosperity of seaborne traffic. Realising the vital need for efficiency in our ports, and in all other requirements of our merchant navy, I took upon the opening of this, the largest graving dock in the world, as a good augury for the future of Southampton." The Queen christened the dock by pouring a jar of Empire wine from a silver cup.—British Wireless.

The needs of a New Netherland Hospital is still the most pressing problem, and unfortunately the committee is unable to go forward with the scheme for re-building as the Building Fund is only a third of the total amount required. TERRORISM IN INDIA

LORD LLOYD REFUTED

AN IMPROVING SITUATION

London, July 26.

Lord Reading, in the House of Lords to-night, referring to a recent speech made by Lord Lloyd, said the impression it created was that the Government were concealing information relating to the political conditions and the spread of communist and terrorist activities.

Lord Reading for the Government, said there was no foundation for the suggestions made by Lord Lloyd.

Terrorism had existed for many years in India, but the activities of the terrorists had been largely crippled.

If it was suggested that terrorism was worse or on the increase, that was definitely opposed to the considered view of the Government, and the Government in India.

FINAL STAGE OF SILVER PACT

Chancellor On the American Experiment

"MAY PROVE A GREAT SUCCESS"

THE CONFERENCE FUTURE

London, July 26.

Remarking on a debate on public work expenditure in the Commons to-night the Chancellor of the Exchequer repudiated the suggestion that the adjournment of the World Conference was synonymous with its conclusion or completion.

It is clear that the conference was obliged to adjourn without being able to tackle the most important part of the agenda because conditions intervened just as the conference began which made it impossible at present to continue the discussions usefully upon some of the most important points.

He entirely agreed that in the circumstances in the United States recently, it was impossible for that Government to contemplate the temporary stabilisation of their currency.

He saw no reason to assume that there should not be a resumption of the conference when changed circumstances enable the countries again to discuss the currency question in an atmosphere of tranquillity.

U. S. EXPERIMENT.

He still believed that the attainment of full national prosperity was dependent on the restoration of international prosperity. But the United States was trying an experiment on a gigantic scale of extraordinary interest. Conditions there were more favourable for its success than they would be anywhere else.

He reminded the House that President Roosevelt had had to face a reduction of wages far greater than had taken place here. It might be that the experiment would be a great success.

EMPIRE CURRENCY.

In reply to a suggestion which was made during the debate for an Empire Currency Union, Mr. Chamberlain pointed out the difficulties ascertaining the right relation between the various Empire currencies and sterling.

It was not a part of the policy of this country to link sterling either to gold on the one hand or to the dollar on the other. We must continue to pursue our own course independently in the interests of this country and of the Empire.

Referring to public works, he reviewed the schemes already undertaken and said the Government were constantly searching for directions in which they could in any way stimulate industry and restart the wheels.—British Wireless.

GRAIN CODE APPROVED

RESTRICTION ON TRADERS

NO MORE WILD SPECULATION

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Message Ordinance, 1931. Received, July 27, 12.30 a.m.)

Washington, July 26.

The grain traders have lost no time in drafting a code, following the warning issued by Mr. George Peek, the Federal Agricultural Administrator.

The code has already been submitted to and approved by the Government.

It provides, firstly, for the permanent limitation of fluctuations to five cents daily for wheat, four cents for corn, and three cents for oats.

Secondly, it eliminates indemnity trading, whereby the trader promises to buy or sell at a future date at a price above or below the current quotation.

Thirdly, it lays down that the margins required will increase with the size of commitments; and Fourthly, the traders agree to limit the amount of grain which any trader can control.—United Press. Per Gold Bar Co.

New York, July 26.
General Balbo and his Italian air armada have decided to begin the return flight to Italy. The aeroplanes leave to-morrow by the Northern route, via Ireland.—Reuter.

FIVE-POWER CONTRACT

ALL SIGNATURES NOW APPENDED

FIGURES SECRET

(Special to "Telegraph")

London, July 26.

Senator Key Pittman completed the present stage of his campaign for the rehabilitation of silver at four o'clock this afternoon when the supplementary five-power silver contract was signed.

The contract consists of an agreement between the five principal producing countries, Mexico, Peru, Canada, Australia and the United States regarding the amount of silver which each will absorb into its own Treasury in order to counter-balance the 35,000,000 ounces which India is permitted to sell annually under the Nine-Power Agreement.

FIGURES SECRET.

Mexico, Peru and Canada signed the contract on Monday. Australia and the United States signed at four o'clock this afternoon.

All the signatories to the contract are pledged to keep the exact figures secret until ratifications have been exchanged.—United Press. Per Gold Bar Co.

"Abolish Honeymoons? NEVER!"

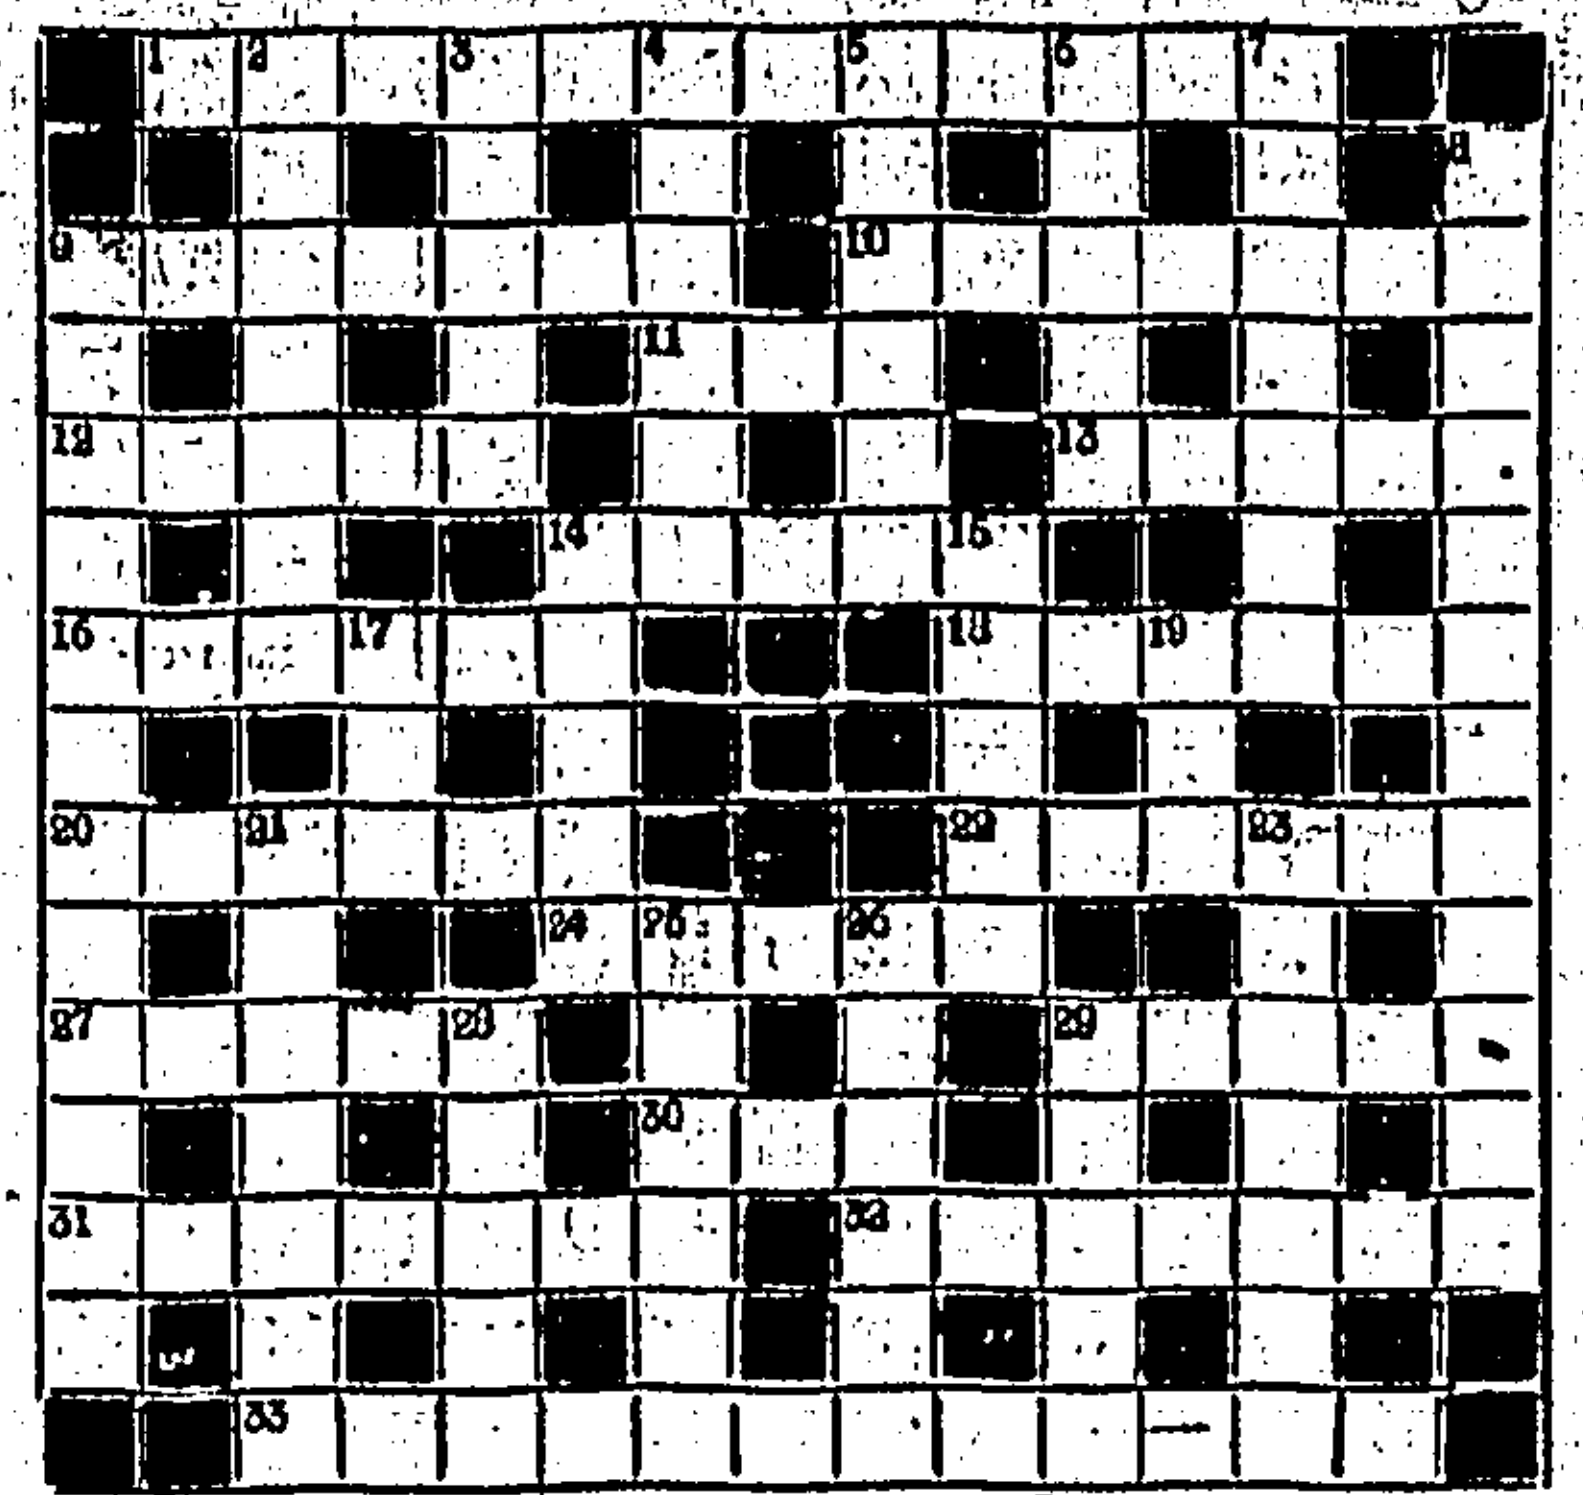

The honeymoon . . . blissful moments, worth every cent they cost . . . hold Judith Anderson (left), stage star; Mrs. George Elliman (centre), New York socialite; and Robert Buckner (right), advertising executive, answering Mary Borden's proposal that the ancient institution be abolished.Novelist's Startling Proposal Draws a Fiery Counter-AttackProminent Figures of Stage, Society and Business Rally to Defence of RomanceIn the preceding article, Mary Borden, London novelist, and others urged that the honeymoon be abolished. Here is an answering chorus of "Noes" from prominent figures of the stage, society and business.

By Julia Blanshard

Abolish honeymoons? NEVER!

That is the answer given by a quartet of famous folks to the shocking proposal made by Mary Borden, author of "The Technique of Marriage!""Please don't do away with honeymoons," pleads Judith Anderson, well-known stage star, now rehearsing for "Reunion in Vienna.""One by one, the romantic things in life are being done to death by stern realists," Miss Anderson maintains. "Why remove them all? Other things being equal, the honeymoon is an opportunity to start married life in an ideal realm which two people build for themselves, away from familiar scenes and familiar faces.""Honeymoons give couples a chance to make the adjustments
in temperament and disposition that are necessary when two lives are joined. Even if everything does crumble later, at least there is the memory of the honeymoon.
But it shouldn't crumble. If the honeymoon sees them off to a good start."A society woman, Mrs. George Elliman, backs all that Judith
Anderson says on the subject.
Mrs. Elliman is a popular member of the younger New York-Long Island society clique. She was Natica de Acosta, niece of the late Mrs. Philip Lydig, who was the beautiful Rita de Acosta."It is very wise for young couples to start their married lifewith a honeymoon," Mrs. Elliman asserts. "If they are really in love with each other, as they should be,
the happiness they have had alone
together without any of the outside cares or worries is something to remember always and look back on with joy. Especially if they have been tired out with engagement parties and the wedding festivities, and the arrangements for their new home, they will be blissfully happy to get away alone together in a completely new world
on their honeymoon.""If they are a couple with little money, they probably won't be able to have a vacation again for some time and the husband won't regret having spent the money he
did. If they are a wealthy couple, they will be just as happy looking back on their honeymoon as the poorer couples because the rest of their lives may be so taken up with social activities that perhaps they,
too, won't have another vacation
together.""My advice is to take a honeymoon, by all means. Even if it doesn't turn out as well as you had hoped, you'll at least never have to worry about what you may have missed."Mrs. Geline MacDonald Bowman, of Richmond, Va., president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, makes a plea for a honeymoon for young couples—even if it is only a short one."The psychological effect upon a young couple who get away from the protection of parental roof andinterested friends, out into an environment where no one knows or cares about them, is a good experience to make them realize that they will need to stand alone in the world and work out their problems together in a world indifferent to their ultimate success or failure," is her reasoning."A short honeymoon, of something less than a week even, which has as its objective the return to establish a comfortable and happy home where both enter actively into the actual labour of preparation, is a good beginning for happiness," she continued."Joint labour makes each appreciate a home, leaves short time to dwell upon the little differences of habits and tastes until working together to found the home blends
such differences into a happy combination, by mutual concessions.
A honeymoon is the best possible start toward a happy marriage.""One man comes forward with an emphatic opinion. Robert Buckner, prominent in the business and advertising field, is all
for honeymoons."The honeymoon," he explains,
"is an inescapable period of life,
or state of mind. When you grant that marriage is a desirable state of affairs but argue that the honeymoon is no way to begin it, your reasoning is like that of the dear old maid who loved omelets but couldn't quite bring herself to
"like other forms of sudden elevation from the earth, do produce some tragedies, but what does the trip have to do with it? What ghastly horrors can travelling produce which can't be experienced at home? People make mistakes without regard to scenery.""Abel Bonnard made an observation that seems to me applicable. He said, 'Between a man and a woman, peaceful friendships are founded on indifference, and troubled friendships on love.' If then, the average honeymoon produces some friction and trouble, is it such a terrible sign?"

DARLING FOOL

CHAPTER XLIII

One day in late February, a day of premature spring, Monnie was walking along High street on her way home. Suddenly it seemed to her that the thaw had come to her heart as well as to all the brooks and rivulets. It was as if the pieces of a puzzle had fallen in place and she saw her life again in its true proportions. She had been frozen up since Dan's death, had not really believed in the coming of a warmer, happier time.

"Is it wrong to feel this way?" she wondered, innocently. After all, in the eyes of the world, she had no right to mourn Dan. She must hide her sorrow and be secret about it. Sandra was his widow—and Sandra was far away by this time, seeking to reclaim her lost beauty.

But it was true that life had colour for Monnie again, had regained meaning all of a sudden, as if someone had "flung wide a case-moment," showing her a dim, remembered beauty.

"This is what it used to be like before—before I was in love with Dan," the girl confessed to herself. Every day then had been an adventure and a promise. She had taken pleasure in simple things, had laughed joyously at nothing, then, almost without her knowing it, Dan had taken possession of her heart. She had lived only for the sound of his voice, for a chance sight of him in the street, for the hope of some further meeting with him. It had all been so unsatisfactory, so bitter, so sad. Nothing had come of it and here was she, almost 21, wondering what to do with her days.

The high clouds, scudding across a piercingly blue sky, matched her mood. How strange, she thought a little sadly, Charles was these days. Before he had been her friend, always there, a very tower of strength to lean on. Now he seemed cold and distant. His manner with her was formal. He never "dropped in" casually any more, except when she was away. In Dr.

Waterman's office she heard of him casually. He was going here, going there. He appeared to be much in demand. His health was completely restored now, the doctor had told her, hinting, too, that Charles expected to "move on" shortly.

"He's getting restless here," the white haired, keen eyed old gentleman had remarked that morning. "He's perfectly fit and he wants to get back to his work."

Timidly Monnie had asked what that was. Charles had always been curiously reticent about it. Dr. Waterman had fixed her with a penetrating glance.

"Why, the boy's an architect and a very good one. Didn't you know that?" he had asked briskly. "Overworked and had to take a rest in the south of France. Some girl played hob with him, over there. She was an American, married to a title. Charles got into the papers—a duel or something. His nerves weren't mended. The boy was far from normal, really, and I wrote him to come here. I know this little town of ours would be good for him. And it has been. For a while I thought he meant to settle here. He talked of it but now he's changed his mind and wants to get back to New York. Perfectly natural, I suppose."

Again Monnie felt that queer little pang. The town would be strange, unfriendly almost, without Charles Eustace. She would miss him greatly.

"Hello."

"How are you?" He stood, staring down at her, his frown giving way to a smile.

"I'm well." Charles fell into step beside her.

"You look it." He gave her an oblique glance.

Monnie said, offhandedly, "I hear you're going away."

His face fell into grim lines again. "Who's been tattling?"

"Oh, I didn't know it was a secret." Monnie flushed, feeling resentful. Why would he behave like this? It was so stupid. She pushed her away.

"It's not exactly. Yes, I'm pushing along. Got to get back to work. I've loafed long enough."

It was on the tip of her tongue to say, "Why not work here?" But she curbed the impulse. Besides that would be a very silly thing to ask. Naturally his kind of job would take him to the big cities. He belonged there.

"Did you stop at the house?" she inquired a moment later, for want of something better to say. A half constrained silence had fallen between them.

"Yes, to see Kay about those dance tickets. She stopped by to ask if I wanted to buy some and I wasn't in. It's a benefit, I believe."

His voice, Monnie thought, softened when he spoke Kay's name. Well, that was all right. Charles and Kay would be a wonderful couple. Monnie had a cinema flash of herself, the maiden aunt, hovering over Kay's rosy children.

They say she used to be a pretty girl years ago. She suppressed a sigh but Charles caught the half-uttered sound and whirled.

"You're not ill!" His voice seemed so accusing that Monnie almost jumped.

"No. What made you think so?" He stared down at her, almost angrily. "You're thinner—and so pale. It makes me—" refusing to finish.

"Makes you what?" Curious how she longed to have him finish the sentence. But he set his lips tight and would not. He stalked on.

"Charles, you're tearing along so I can't possibly keep up with you." She was laughing but there were tears close to her eyes. Why was he so cross with her? What had she done?

"Sorry." But he didn't look it. His dark, handsome face was grim unyielding.

"Won't you come in?" They were at the gate now.

"Thanks, no. I'd better not." He lifted his hat and was gone.

Monnie caught her underlip between her teeth, feeling wounded. Her brief joy in the lovely day was destroyed. How tiresome one's friends were! How tiresome Charles, of all people! How incalculable were all men!

Next day, Dr. Waterman, black bag in hand, charged into the office where Monnie, fresh and crisp in a new white blouse and dark blue jumper, sat typing case records. Her bronze hair was tucked behind her ears in a fashion new and becoming. The old gentleman stood stock still for a moment, regarding her.

"Bless my soul!"

Monnie lifted her eyes, abstractedly. "I beg your pardon, doctor?"

He chuckled. "Just wishing I was young again. Wouldn't I have more gumption than these young fellows, though?"

She blushed, tucking an unruly curl out of the way.

"Isn't that a new outfit?"

"I've been wearing it for a week."

"Hum. Hum." He sat down, knitting his white brows, staring abstractedly at her flying fingers.

"Stop a minute, girl. You're like a whirlwind. I want to ask you something."

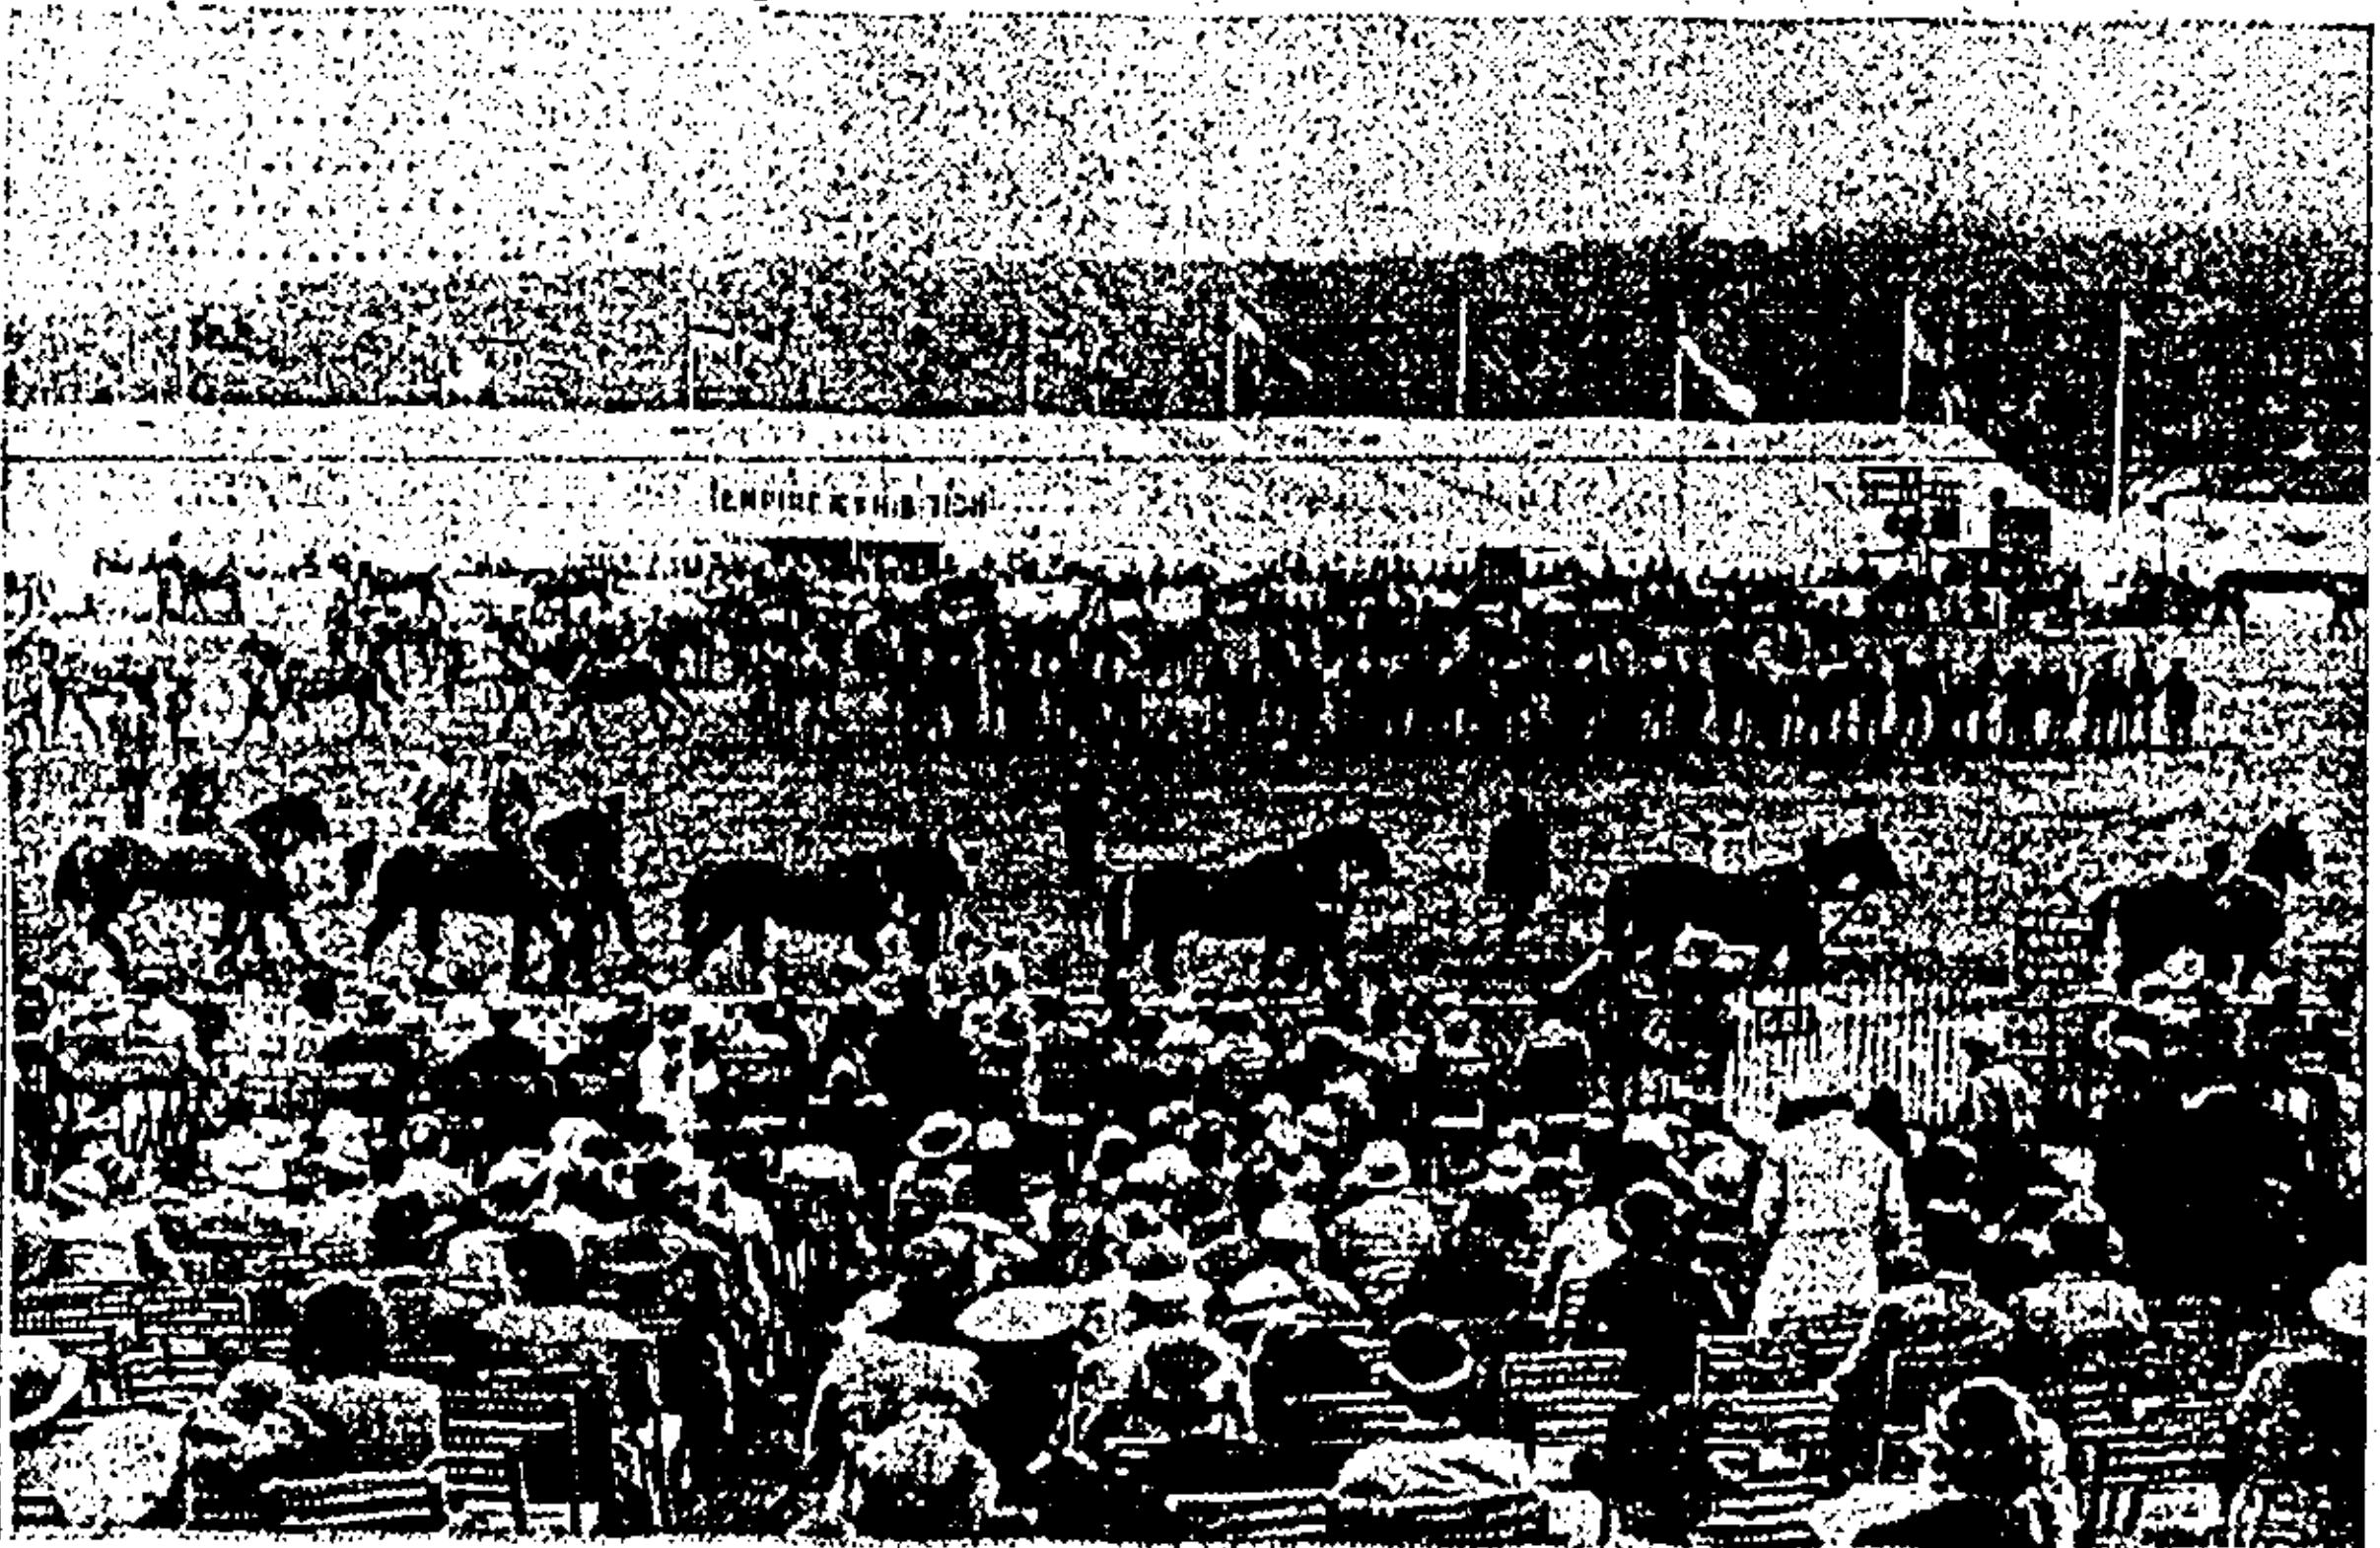

Obediently Monnie laid her hands in her lap.

"Did that nephew of mine stop by this morning?"

Heavy-eyed?

Partial constipation! More subtly dangerous than complete constipation. Its victim may feel little discomfort—notice no irregularity. But the heavy eye, the sallown skin, the coated tongue show that unremoved waste is spreading poison throughout the body. To correct this all-too-common trouble, there is only one remedy which has had the approval of doctors for over sixty years—Eno, first thing every morning. It is known and trusted all over the world. There's nothing else so safe and pleasant to take which at the same time can do you so much good. But make sure you get

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

"Love On Wheels" is coming on Sunday next to the King's Theatre, the Gainsborough picture, with Jack Hulbert putting across his famous grin and spontaneous fooling.

This film is something absolutely new in the way of entertainment. A quick-action comedy full of racy humour and charming song numbers.

It is not difficult to imagine Jack Hulbert's comic antics when you think of him as a shop assistant in a big store, whose job is to be fired when over a customer complains. He desires to get on in the world and one day, to the astonishment of the general manager, fires himself. The one-time shop assistant does eventually get a good position, but not before the onlooker has been treated to some very amusing incidents.

Gordon Barker has an important role in this film. He plays a conductor on a Green Line bus and his cockney humour gets full play.

"Song of the Eagle" All the tremendously exciting events in the last twenty years are vividly pictured on the screen in a swooping panorama of American life entitled "Song of the Eagle." Paramount's thundering epic of the American scene, which opens on Sunday at the Queen's Theatre. A superb cast including such excellent players as: Charles Bickford, Richard Arlen, May Brian, Joan Herriott, Louise Dresser, Andy Devine and George E. Stone, are featured under the direction of Ralph Murphy.

Two tremendous decades flash by depicting America's post-war inertia in the midst of prosperity and the heights to which this mighty nation rose during the depression. Here is an intrepid battle against the forces of evil and corruption as seen through the startled eyes of one average family—here too is a prognostication of the future, for the picture carries you up to the end of 1933.

"The Age of Consent" Dorothy Wilson is making her debut in cinema in the "Age of Consent" at the Central Theatre.

Dorothy worked in the studio for two years. She was one of the prettiest girls on the lot. But if none of the directors ever thought of suggesting a screen test to Dorothy, she herself had even less interest in acting.

One afternoon, the Radio Pictures' production head finished reading the synopsis of "The Age of Consent" and requested the stenographic department for a complete script.

His mind was occupied with the story, his thoughts filled with the types which would best suit the roles of gay young college boys and girls. It was Dorothy who brought him the script, and a sudden hunch caused him to ask: Have you ever taken a screen test? Would you like to act? Dorothy wasn't overthrilled. She was willing but not eager to be photographed and to have her voice recorded.

They gave her a script to read... the script which she almost knew by heart from having typed it several times. The test was taken, and Dorothy so impressed the boss she was signed for a term contract and given the lead in the college play as her first part.

"The Age of Consent" which is based on "Crossroads" a play by Martin Flavin, boasts of a cast composed of Eric Linden, Richard Cromwell, Arline Judge, John Halliday, Aileen Pringle and Reginald Barlow. Gregory La Cava directed.

"Strictly Personal" Millions of lonely Americans find their only friends through the advertising columns of the papers published by the matrimonially inclined "Get-Together Clubs."

"Strictly Personal," B. P. Schulberg's new Paramount picture which commences to-day at the Queen's Theatre tells the inside story of these agencies to which swarm all the sex-starved, lonely spinsters, widows, widowers and bachelors who seek this means of relief from solitude.

The "Lonely Hearts" Club is a legitimate enterprise that sincerely tries to overcome its members' loneliness. Marjorie Rambeau and Edward Ellis, its proprietors, who investigate every applicant for membership, and turn down those whose motives are not for the best interests of all members, themselves get a vicarious joy in bringing happiness to those that trust them. With them is Dorothy Jordan, their ward.

An Eastern racketeer, played by Louis Calhern, forces them to make him a partner, turns the club into a rendezvous for those who ought to realize the blackmailing possibilities, and kills a widow member for her jewels. He tries to plant the crime on Ellis, attempts to abduct Dorothy Jordan, and is only stopped when Eddie Quillan, in the role of a wise-cracking reporter, learns of the plot.

"Wild Girl" Filmed in one of the most impressive scenic spots of the West—the big trees of Sequoia National Park among the California Sierras—"Wild Girl" is said to offer breath-taking backgrounds for its swift action. The new Fox picture opens on the screen of the King's Theatre very shortly. Charles Farrell, Joan Bennett and Ralph Bellamy have the principal roles.

THAT MORNING
PAPERMake State Officials
Leap Out Of Bed

Sofia. The Bulgarian state official buys his morning paper in order to discover whether he is likely to receive his salary—probably some four or six months overdue.

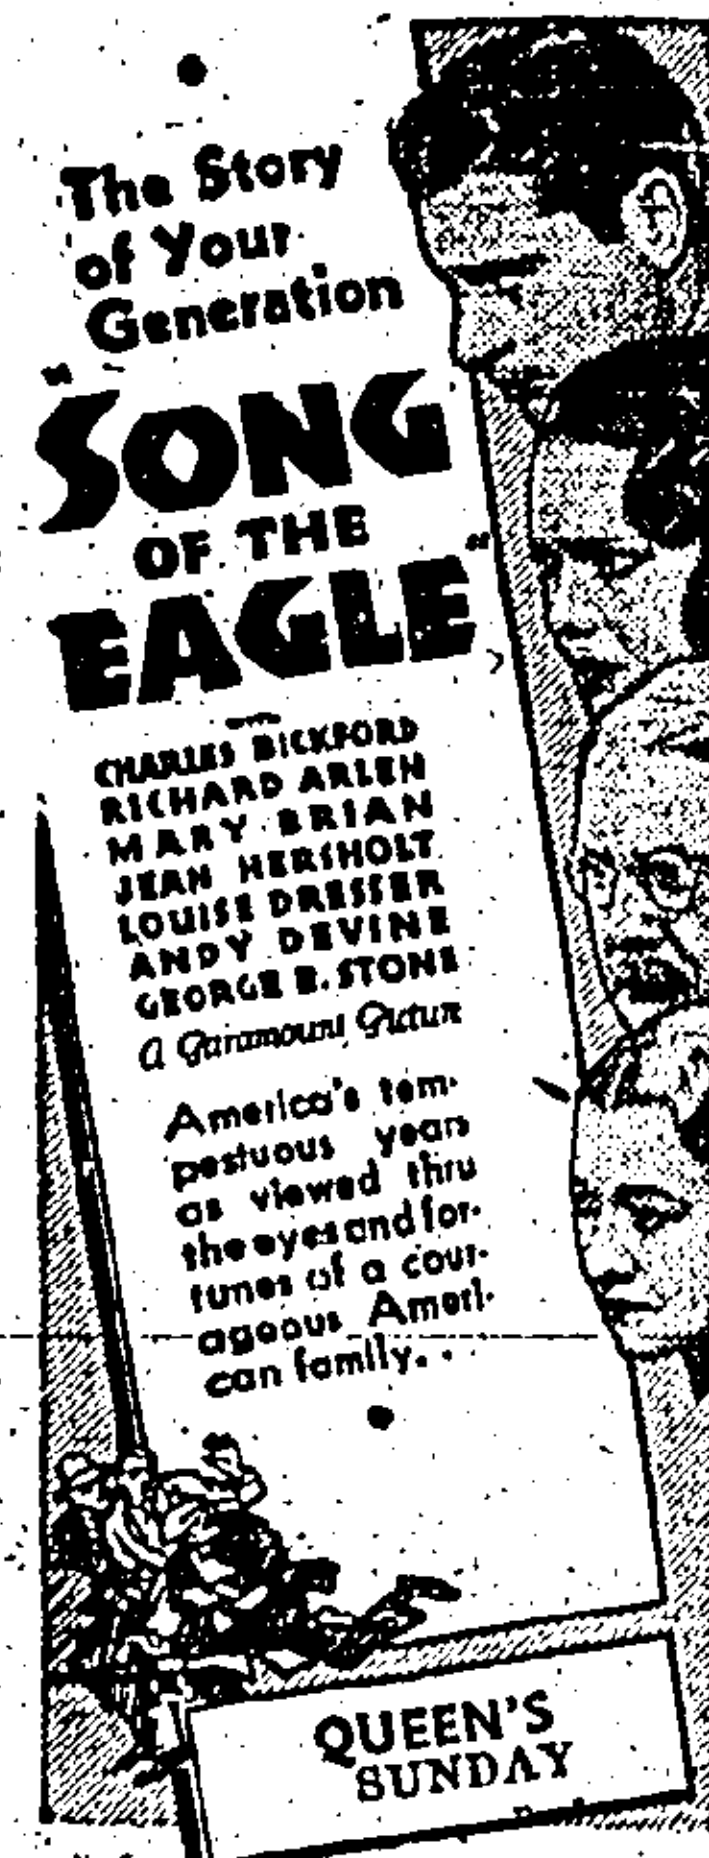

It is a great event for him when, on opening his paper, he sees, printed in large block capitals, a notice saying that his salary will be paid in a month's time.

He can then turn with untroubled mind to state deficits and the latest Macedonian murder.—Reuter.

How
Do You Sleep
These Nights

837 COILS—each in an individual muslin pocket—give instantaneous adjustment to the slightest movement. No other mattress has the same construction as the BEAUTY-REST.

Sleep as You Have Never Slept on SIMMONS Beautyrest

A good night's rest brings you a mysterious glowing something no beauty aids can match. Takes away every trace of fatigue from a woman's face.

But—a night of only part-way resting sleep leaves on your face lines you cannot hide.

Science says that really rejuvenating sleep comes only when every nerve and muscle can relax.

A lumpy mattress or a sagging one cannot give it to you. You may not realize the difference. But surely and steadily that difference is being written on your face.

There is a mattress that gives you this deep rejuvenating sleep—the Simmons BEAUTYREST.

All through this famous mattress are tiny coils of finely tempered steel. 837 of them. Each in its individual muslin pocket. They buoy you up. You feel no restriction. You can turn in your sleep without knowing it! Every inch of you gets gloriously relaxed!

Don't let another day go by without your seeing this famous mattress.

SIR ARTHUR SALTER

If there is any man who can rescue China from her financial morass it should be Sir Arthur Salter. Her people and friends will, therefore, welcome the news that he has accepted an invitation to act as adviser to the Nanking Government. Sir Arthur's profound experience of world economic and financial problems, and his previous knowledge of China's complex finances, should prove of inestimable value to-day when the usual budgetary difficulties are accentuated by the loss of revenue from Manchuria and heavy military expenditure. Sir Arthur is generally recognised as one of the finest financial brains in the world and his political wisdom is in no way inferior to his technical ability. In the latter field, if technical ability means a combination of the creative mind with the executive hand, there are not a dozen men in Europe to equal him. His remarkable book on "Recovery" reveals the trend of his thought on present-day economic problems and if he is able to persuade Nanking to work out his programme on a smaller scale, naturally, that the conception of his book, it might serve the purpose not only of rehabilitating China's finances but also of setting an example to countries in a similar plight. That he is well fitted to be entrusted with such an experiment is beyond doubt. He was responsible for the bulk of the burdensome work which resulted in the financial reconstruction of Austria and Hungary, under League auspices, after the war. He is an example of the British civil servant at his best but with an outlook widened by a natural largeness of vision as well as by the experience garnered in the last fourteen years at Paris and Geneva, where he has done more perhaps than anyone else living to set a standard of what the "ideal international man" should be. His reputation is such that men trained by him at Geneva are always being plundered. Queney went to the Bank of France and Jacobsen to the National Economic Council in Sweden. If he only succeeds in saving a few of China's financial leaders with the "Salter tradition" this work in China will be his.

NOTES OF THE DAY

The frequency with which police searching squads delay buses near the Police Training School suggests an enquiry as to whether this is really necessary. If the men are engaged on serious duty, little complaint can be offered, but if, as it sometimes appears, the object is merely to give training to new recruits, a method might be found which would cause less inconvenience. Buses are legally expected to run to a schedule and if the search is efficiently carried out delays of a minute and more occur. If the vehicles get away quickly, it merely means a duty too perfunctorily performed to be of any value. Better practice, if it is practice, could be provided by making use of a bus not employed on passenger services, putting recruit constables on board with concealed weapons, and setting another batch the task of finding them.

THE EMPIRE FAIR

The replies to Mr. M. F. Key's Empire Fair questionnaire are both encouraging and helpful and show that the inquiry was well worth while. The desire expressed that, in future fairs, steps should be taken to regulate the attendance will be generally endorsed. Apart from this, little criticism is forthcoming. The consensus of opinion among those obviously in the best position to judge is that a distinct value attaches to the holding of an annual fair; most exhibitors are in favour of confining it to Empire commodities; the desirability of enclosing the Exhibition in a single area is stressed; and most firms agree that to expect the organisation to be carried out entirely by willing volunteers is asking rather too much. In short, some very sound suggestions are advanced regarding future arrangements. It says much for the way in which the Fair has been run during the last two years that an opportunity to "say a few words" found commentators content to make constructive proposals.

THOSE ISLANDS

France seems likely to draw a small hornet's nest about her ears by laying formal claim to those islands in the China Sea, although the most astonishing thing about the business is that there should be any islands with their ownership unsettled. We thought that all the land-grabbing that could possibly be done was efficiently performed many years ago. The sudden interest taken by Japan, the Philippines and China is amusing in a way. If the Japanese reports regarding the number of times since 1918 that the Tokyo Government have been asked to make a formal claim are accurate, someone must be heartily kicking himself to-day.

HYDRONALUM

Germany, which did so much to give aluminum its place in the modern world, has now prepared a new light-weight metal which has all the advantages and none of the defects of aluminum. It is called hydronalium and has been prepared at the works of the I. G. Farbenindustrie, Germany's famous dye trust. Though light in weight and strong, aluminum and its alloys "corrode" under certain weather conditions. They are particularly affected by sea water, while rain and certain forms of dampness also cause damage. As a result, they must be continually recoated with special paints to prevent serious damage to the whole construction. None of these disadvantages are present in hydronalium, it is claimed. It is an alloy of aluminum, magnesium and a very small part of manganese. It differs from other alloys in that it does not need to be worked in heat. Under certain conditions it may be welded, though, up to the present, the different parts of any construction of hydronalium have been riveted together. Manufactured in various degrees of hardness, it can be transported in plates of two millimetre thickness and upward.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH GIRLS' SCHOOLS

By DR. CYRIL NORWOOD
(Headmaster of Harrow)

It is very bold on the part of a man to write about girls' schools; for though I count among my ancestors just as many women as any schoolmistress my sex debar me from speaking either with wisdom or with knowledge. There are excellent women who regard the girls' schools as the ladies of Rome regarded the mysteries of Bona Dea, and hold it to be an educational rite in which no male should take part on pain of death. Still, I had a mother; I have daughters; I am more or less a governor of several girls' schools; I have looked at the outside of them at prizegivings innumerable. I will be bold, and say what I think.

There are not lacking women of courage and foresight in the schools, and the retiring president of the Headmistresses' Association the other day was fearless in her enunciation of the thoughts and manners of the present day. I want to see that courage and that foresight devoted to the adjustment of the girls' schools to the real needs of the pupils that throng them, for I am sure that a wider outlook is needed, and not in the education of girls only. Much of what I say will be true of boys, only more so.

EXAM. HANDICAP.

For one of the commonest things which you hear said by thoughtful headmistresses at the present time is that there are large numbers of girls to whom they cannot give the right education, the education best for them, because of the examination system, the demands of matriculation, and the bonds of tradition in which education is tied up. Only they never seem to say, either collectively or individually, what the right education is.

Now, I am all for making examinations our servants and not our masters: I am all for putting matriculation into the university compound, where it ought to be, and locking the gate on it. But I do want to know more clearly what we are going to put in its place, and nobody talks about that.

TRUE OBJECTIVE.

It is human to have prepossessions, and headmistresses are human. When the great movement of high school education began, the boys' schools were dominated by a narrow curriculum leading logically to the university and nowhere else. The pioneer women in the teaching profession took over the system entire; for their primary concern was not to devise the best education for women but to demonstrate their intellectual equality with men. They were probably right in so doing.

But much water has flowed under bridges since that date, and what the women then set out to show has been abundantly proved, so far as it can be proved. There is no subject in which some women will not be as good as the best men at the stage of school or university work. But this having been demonstrated it is not time to turn to what ought to be the real objective, and not send out quite so many girls who are fitted to do what boys ought to do, and do it very well, but who are by no means particularly fitted to do what girls ought to do?

Moreover, we hear a good deal nowadays about juvenile unemployment; and perhaps without sharing Hitler's determination to "confine" women once again to the provinces of children, cooking, and church, one may be justified in hazarding

the view that it is scarcely wise to have so many girls competing successfully with boys for jobs.

I submit that it is becoming a very pressing matter for those who are responsible for education in this country, and in particular for the Board of Education, to seek to arrive at a considered view of what ought to be taught to the ordinary boy and the ordinary girl whose education is going to stop short at 16, or at latest, 18. Without that view to guide us, our whole educational development will be a muddle.

IGNORED REALITIES.

What, then, is to be the education of Everygirl? Before we answer that, we ought surely to ask: What is Everygirl going to be? There are only two things that I know about her future. The first is that she is certainly going to be a citizen and to exercise a vote. The other is that she is probably going to get married, to make a home, and to bring up children. A visitor from another sphere, contemplating our schools, might perhaps form the impression that our girls are so happily constituted by nature that they can take all these activities unseen and unprepared. They do so take them, many of them, and the results might be better.

Let us assume that the above is a fair statement of the destiny of Everygirl, and that a school course is a preparation for life, and not for an examination; what ought her education to be? In the first place, it should aim at the production of health, strength, and activity to the highest degree possible. Girls' schools are already, I think, in front of boys' schools in this respect, but it is not in every school course as fundamental as it ought to be.

Next, the curriculum should be built on English subjects as its main foundation; the mother tongue, how to speak it, write it, use it; geography, dealt with in the modern way, which gives reasons as well as facts; and history which moves on from the stories of the past to concentrate on the world of the present, how and why it has grown to be what it is. On this foundation should be built lessons in simple citizenship.

Third, science, so long as it is alive. Science entered the curriculum about 1870, and by 1900 the pedants had made it the dearest subject of the lot. Let Everygirl try to learn something of biology, and hygiene, with mere elements of physics and chemistry; it is not her business to be potential B.Sc.

Finally, let her do her best at the aesthetic and practical subjects. It will be her concern to give beauty to the home; teach her to a right judgment of things musical and artistic. It will be her concern to give order to the home; let her have her chance of learning something of the many mysteries of housecraft.

But, it will be said, you have left out of the training of Everygirl modern languages and mathematics. So I have, and I stand a heretic confessed. If she likes French, let her learn it; if she has no linguistic gift, let her leave it out. If she is good at algebra and geometry (and she probably isn't), let her try; but so long as she can do a little arithmetic accurately, what more does she want?

Can anyone, forgetting tradition and looking at the needs of life, give a satisfying answer?

The Very Idea!

LETTERS TO A SELF-MADE COLONIAL

Stolen & Censored by Eddie Kelly.

SOME time ago we were fortunate enough to acquire a series of letters written by a new-chum Colonial to his Girl Friend at Home.

Fully aware of the dangers and evils that lurk around the corner, ever ready to pounce upon and ensnare the unwary newcomer, we printed several of the letters as a warning to others.

Our Colonial, who shall remain nameless, has received a batch of replies from his Girl Friend. They were done up with blue ribbon when we found them, and as he's been on a bender for the past week, he won't miss the one we've borrowed.

London, June 22.

Pete, darling:
Your last letter terrified me. I feel sure, sweetheart, that you are running into danger in that terrible Hongkong. Whatever you do, Pete, my pet, look after yourself, and stay away from those awful cabarets. I've seen them in the talks, and the Hongkong papers you sent me are full of the terrible doings and carrying ons. Darling, I don't want you to become one of those gigolos.

I am so glad that the drought is over, dear, and that you don't have to go thirsty any longer. I think the Hongkong government was absolutely callous and unmoral the way they made everybody put their names on chits before they could get a drink. You didn't explain what a chit was, dear, so I looked it up in the dictionary, which says a chit is a girl or a woman who is regarded as little more than a child.

Were they Chinese girls, Pete? I felt just a teeny weeny bit jealous when you told me about all the chits you had got. I hope, dear, that you are being good.

I suppose now that the water shortage is over you don't have to go out to that terrible Peninsula to assuage your thirst. I had a look at the map of Hongkong the other day, but there was no Peninsula marked on it.

I'm sure your friend, Mr. Kelly, must be a nice man. It was so kind of him to look after you when you first arrived in Hongkong, and when I come out to join you, dear, I want to meet him. He is a brave man to face those shroffs the way he does. Does he have any chits, dear? I think, from the way you write, that he is much too nice to bother about women, especially the chit type.

Darling, I know how hard it is to get home comforts out in the Far East, so, in case you feel cold, I have knitted you a sweater, two pairs of woollen socks, and a pair of woollen gloves, which I want you to wear whenever you venture out of your hut. Always wear flannel next to the skin, dear, and keep your throat muffled up against those typhoons. I have wrapped the woollen things around a bottle of lime-juice, which is good for the blood. Whenever you get some water from that mean Hongkong government, put a little lime-juice in it.

I hope the Pando doesn't pilfer the parcel when he's trekking across the desert with it. How often does he call at your village with mail?

Darling, this is all I can write now. Give Mr. Kelly my address so that he can write to me if anything ever happens you. Ever yours—

AN APOLOGY

We admit now that our action was totally undignified. We should not have thrown that bottle at him. At least, not before it was empty.

But a man is inclined to lose his temper in this climate, and in moments of passion, does things that he's sorry for afterwards. We hope Pete will accept this apology in the spirit with which it is given. It was our last bottle of beer, too.

But there you are. In Hongkong humidity and humidity don't mix. There's an "H" of a difference between them. Besides, Pete needn't have been so nasty about that ten bucks we've owed him. We owe lots of better men than he is, more than we were ever able to squeeze out of him.

Still, we're sorry. Hongkong people have a lot to put up with. What with summer, the cabaret evil, shroffs, chits, people who write blistering letters to the papers, all this mystery about the data of the opening of the Hongkong Brewery, and a thousand and one other pin-pricks, life seems times isn't worth living.

When we threw that bottle at Pete, he took it so badly. Only shroffs should throw bottles in Hongkong.

Well, it's not stand here and argue. Do I get a line on don't it?

HUGHES'S NET

subtle devices with which he lured him to his doom.

We may recall that Hughes beat Crawford at Bournemouth in the spring. Even though the Australian champion had only been ashore for a few days, this was a fine feat, and there can be no doubt whatever that Hughes' baselino play has been greatly strengthened this year.

He still uses the chop quite a lot, but there is now much more speed in his ordinary straightforward drive. This means volleying, which has always been first class, and, moreover, he is over so much better equipped for repelling a volleying attack, especially as his lobbing is another of his strong points.

FIRST AT THE NET.

Much of his success yesterday was due to the way in which he kept Sutter back and got to the net first, nearly always coming in on the right ball for a finisher.

Sutter was the first to forgo ahead, but although he twice captured Hughes' service Hughes was able to retaliate, and they were 4-4 when the service prevailed, both men playing finely, up to 7-7, when Hughes won Sutter's and then his own for 9-7.

Service breaks also characterized the opening games of the second set, but after 2-2 they pegged away at each other without success, until Hughes once more broke through for 6-6, and was out in the 12th game after Sutter had striven hard in a game of several deuces to stop him.

Third set was a curious one. Sutter had the service lead at 3-1, but failed to win another game. It was not that Hughes ran away from him. They were still battling as keenly as ever, but Hughes was just a shade more resolute and more confident, especially when the point meant a lot, and it just happened that he, and not Sutter, won the games.

In the second match on the Centre Court Satcho really had the measure of Stefani throughout, but after winning two sets very much as he pleased, the first at 6-2 and the second at 6-4, after the Italian had led by 3-1, he proceeded to enjoy a little gentle exercise while Stefani, making the most of some rather easy balls which Satcho obligingly sent over, advanced to 4-0.

Satcho then made an effort to catch him, but it was rather half-hearted and eventually came to nothing when, with the score 6-3 against him, he let his service go by the board.

In the next set Stefani played really good tennis and led by 3-1. Unfortunately for him this had the effect of rousing Satcho so thoroughly to action that he recaptured off five games in a row for the match.

WESTMINSTER STADIUM

present available is adequate for the presentation of Ice Hockey on the scale that is provided in Berlin or Paris. In Paris the game has gained public favour so rapidly that within a few months of its introduction it drew an attendance of 18,000 people. It is believed that with the provision of similar facilities in the centre of London a popularity and demand will be achieved in no way less than that attained in these two cities in the last two years.

It is proposed to house at the Stadium Sportman's Club (with modern Club Rooms and a gymnasium) on lines similar to those of some of the famous old Sporting Clubs.

Mr. J. C. P. Magwood, a Director, has been associated with Ice Hockey since 1912 and has been closely connected with recent developments of the game both in England and the Continent as Honorary Match Secretary and as Vice-President of the British Ice Hockey Association. An international player, he captained England 1930-31-32 and was the Delegate of the British Ice Hockey Association to Ligue Internationale de Hockey sur Glace at Prague in 1933.

ESTIMATED PROFITS.

A careful computation of the profit to be anticipated has been prepared, from which it is estimated (after making due allowance for the Founders' Seats and the discount privileges of the smaller subscribers) that the annual net receipts (after deduction of Entertainments Tax) when the Stadium is in operation should be at least £244,500 from sporting events and other sources of revenue, (including profits on catering, advertisements, publicity, etc.) and that the annual net profit should be at least £94,500.

These figures are based on the very conservative estimate of the Stadium being filled to one-half only of its capacity for any event and on lower prices than those hitherto prevailing.

WRIGHT'S LIMERICK COMPETITION

LAST WEEK'S WINNERS

The following are the prize-winners in last week's limerick competition conducted in connexion with Wright's Coal Tar Soap.

A young man of I.L.K.—
V.D.C.
Arose from a Volunteer Spreed;
Said he "Oh these nights,"
"Thank goodness for Wright's."

"SUDES" "You try it—I'm sure you'll agree."

A howler whose name I won't say, Arrived from his club somewhat gay;
But with Wright's and a tub,
And the odd spot of grub,
"BOWSYER" He did not feel bowled out the next day.

"TAKE YOUR USUAL" He paid up
—and called it a day!

The prize-winners are requested to apply to Messrs. Gilman & Co., Ltd. for their awards. We are asked to draw attention to the prizes which are as follows: Ladies—Handbags, Gentlemen—Shaving Brushes, Children—Cameras.

RECREIO AMATEUR PLAYERSWORKING HARD ON MUSICAL SHOW

The Recreio Amateur Players, whose musical show is to be produced early next month are working hard to make the venture a success.

An extra large stage is being constructed for "Madame Jettie," this being necessary by reason of the inclusion of such items as a Mannequin Parade and a Tango.

Perhaps the most attractive feature of this play will be the many songs from musical comedy hits which it carries.

The success of these is assured by reason of the very capable hands into which the music has been entrusted. The orchestration, a task which is by no means easy has been ably undertaken by Mr. Eduardo Siqueira of the well-known Brunswick Dance Orchestra.

SWIMMING SPORTS

Chung Sing Society To Hold Night Fete

The Chung Sing Benevolent Society's bathing pavilion at West Point, Kennedy Town, the latest concrete swimming pavilion to be opened this season, will be used for the Society's first night fete next Saturday, commencing at 7.30 p.m.

Among the swimming events in a highly interesting programme are 50 metres breast stroke for men, and 400 metres for ladies, open to members of the Hongkong International Swimming Association.

Entries for these two events should be sent to the Swimming Secretary, Mr. H. L. Lee, of the Confederation of Life Association, National Bank Building.

South China A.A. to Lay Out Arena

When opportunity affords, the South China Athletic Association intend to commence work on the construction of the biggest and best sports arena in the Colony, by transforming their football field at Carroll Hill into a veritable stadium.

Plans have been prepared for the erection of a permanent club-house fitted with every modern convenience and for the construction of a football stand at a total cost of approximately $27,000. It is the intention of the Association to enlarge their present area, and in addition to their football

NEW YORK STOCK
EXCHANGEYESTERDAY'S MARKET STEADY

According to Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz, the New York market was steady yesterday. Business done 2,040,000 shares. The Wall Street Journal reports: Stocks were generally firm but drifted somewhat during a rather dull session closing irregular within a narrow range due to reports that business is leveling off in several lines. "Money Magazine" reported steel production at 87% of capacity which indicates belated summer recession demand. The automobile industry is pressing for deliveries but placing little new business. Retail sales of automobiles are below those of June and further reduction is feared as a possibility due to the recent break in the market. The price of scrap, which is always a sensitive barometer, has risen to new highs for the year indicating the possibility that a rebound is anticipated in the early fall. Cable received at 11.40 p.m. during our Night Service from Culbertson & Fritz, New York. Stocks: List likely soon to develop a firmer tone, but new commitments should be on a conservative basis pending test of resistance ability. Cotton. Opened quiet and steady, looks like an irregular trading market for the time being. Wheat. Disturbed by the time being. What is completed. New buyers are entering the market confidently. Crop news is deplorable. Spring wheat is beyond relief. Purchases on set-backs advised. Dow-Jones averages:

THE "MADISON SQUARE GARDEN" OF LONDON

WESTMINSTER STADIUM
DESCRIBEDCOVERED ARENA FOR ALL SORTS OF SPORTSJEFF DICKSON APPOINTED
MANAGING DIRECTOR

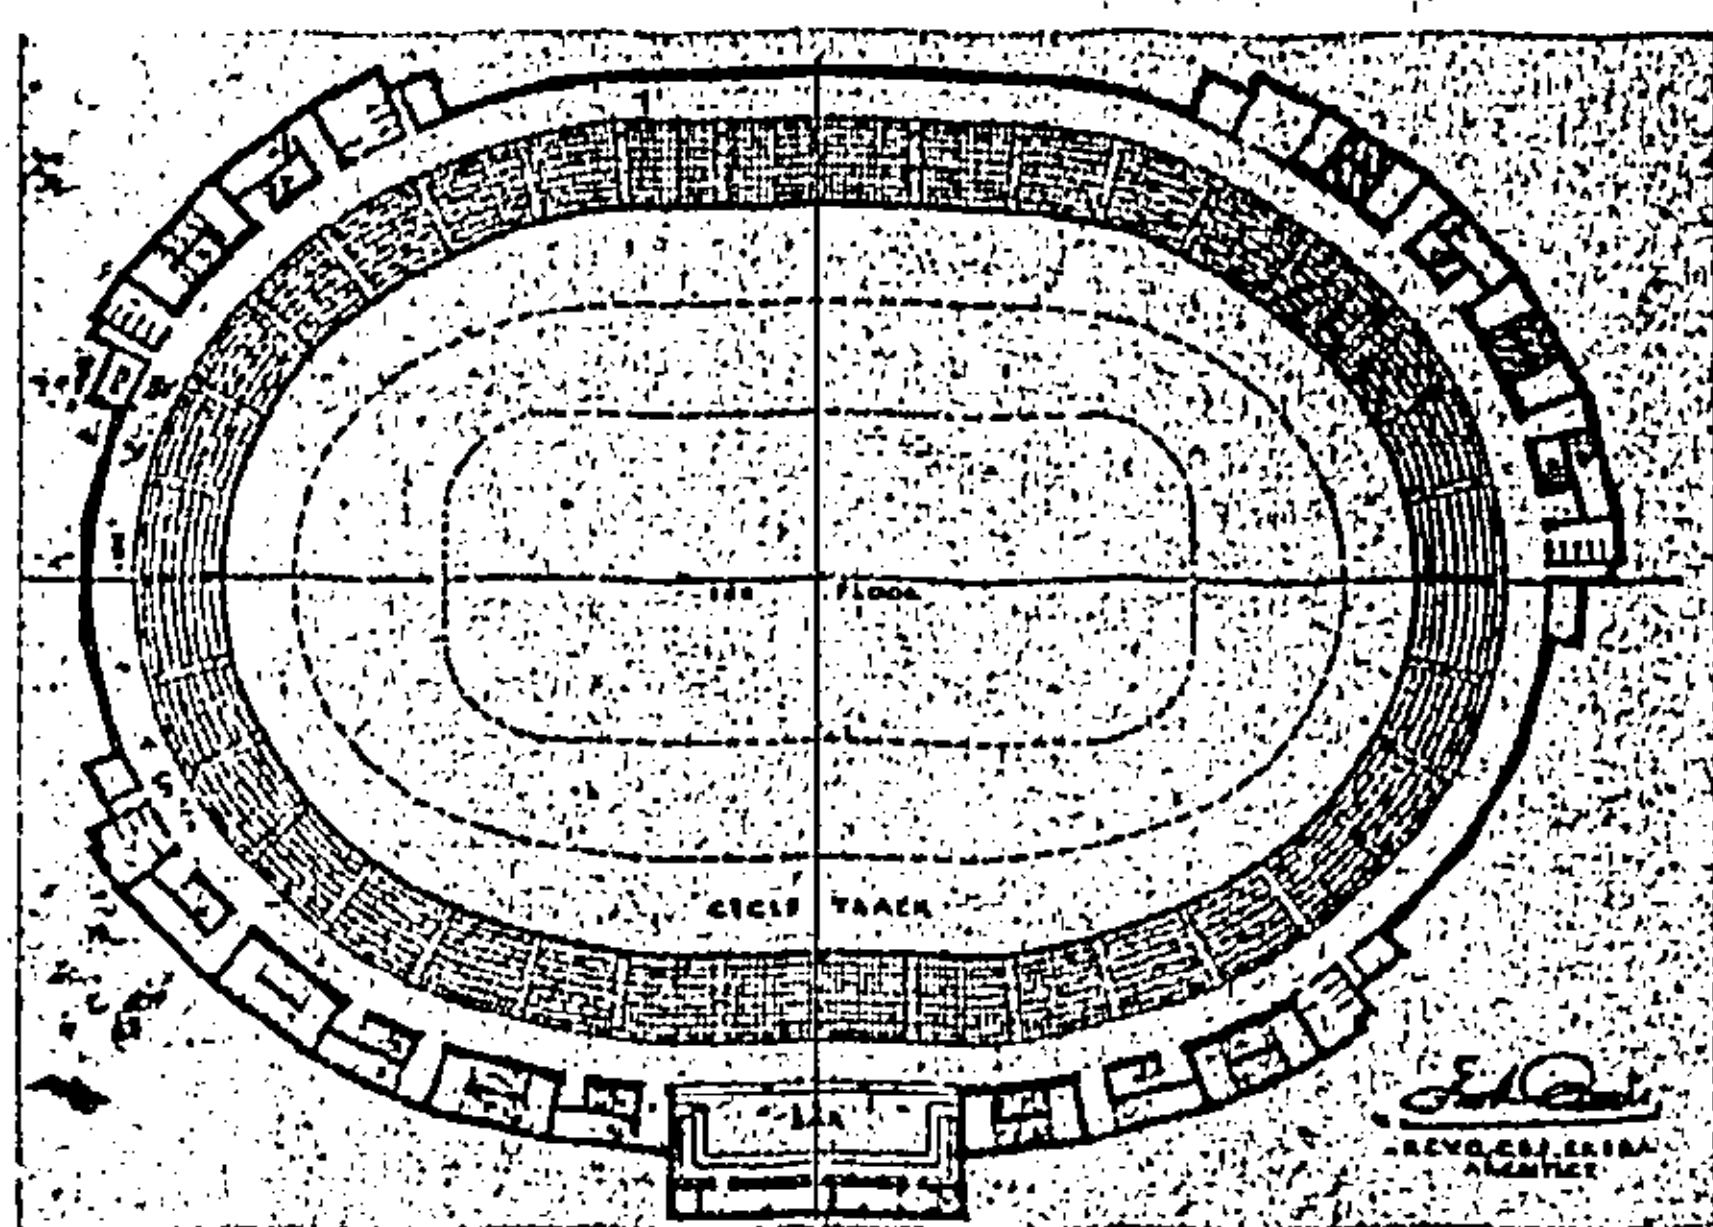

Further particulars in regard to the proposed Westminster Stadium, the "Madison Square Garden of London," are to hand since the first announcement of the project made recently in the Telegraph.

According to the prospectus of the Westminster Stadium, Ltd., the stadium is to be under the personal management of Jeff Dickson, the famous sports promoter, and its aims are to provide facilities for boxing, bicycle racing, ice hockey, skating, wrestling, lawn tennis, athletics, gymnastics, fencing, badminton, and other sporting events. It will be a covered arena.

The Stadium will also be available for Circuses, Exhibitions and Shows of all kinds, Balls, Conferences, mass Political and other meetings. The design of the Stadium will permit of its being adapted for any of the above purposes without the loss of a single day.

100 YEARS OF
CELEBRATEEXCHANGE OF
MEMENTOS

London, July 1. The hundredth cricket match between Eton and Winchester began on Agar's Plough at Eton to-day, and was marked by an interesting ceremony in front of the pavilion.

The Provost of Eton (Dr. M. R. James) handed to the Warden of Winchester (Mr. Oswald Simpkin) a silver cup as a token of friendship.

In reply, the Warden of Winchester presented the Provost with a model of one of Winchester's 17th Century tankards.

The trophies were passed on to the captains of the teams.

The following telegram was received from Lord Hailsham, President of the M.C.C.:

"The Marylebone Cricket Club congratulate the two great schools on playing their hundredth match in friendly rivalry and send best wishes."

The Provost stated that even more far-reaching than the exchange of these tangible memorials of a hundred contests was to give heartfelt expression to the friendly feeling which united their beloved schools. He spoke of the love and reverence which Eton had for Winchester, and added, "might those kindly feelings continue as unbroken as the series of matches."

ROBOT BATSMEN.

The Warden of Winchester said that a century was a small span in the life of the two great schools, but it made them wonder what would happen in another hundred years.

Maybe, he said, the game would be played with mechanical batsmen, with a ball directed by invisible rays and with a cine camera instead of umpires. He hoped, however, that there would be the same interchange of hospitality between host and guest, which was the most important thing of all.

TED PHELPS IS
"FED UP"Gives Sculling
Once-Over

London. Ted Phelps is finished with being a world's champion. He has rowed all his challenges off the river and now there is no one who cares to quibble about his world's sculling title.

Consequently he is unable to make a living. When a venture-some promoter suggests a match the terms are so unfair to Phelps that he has decided it is better to stay at home.

Now he has found a more profitable role.

When a new pleasure steamer Tamar Belle left Westminster Pier for Kew the other day it had Phelps as captain.

"I am fed up waiting for a sculling race for my title," he said. "I'd sooner be in singlet and shorts on the river at Putney or anywhere else—but there seems little chance of a championship race."

"I have an offer to race H. R. Pearce at Toronto late in the summer but the terms are quite unsuitable. I am ready to defend my championship on the Thames against anyone, at any time."

"B" DIVISION
TENNISRecreio Beat The Indian R.C.

The Club de Recreio played off their league tennis match with the Indian Recreation Club at the end of last week, when they won by 6½ sets to 3½.

Scores: J. B. Goncalves and A. E. Xavier (Recreio) lost to S. A. Ismail and A. H. Madar 4-0; beat J. E. A. Curruem and A. H. Sufnad 6-3; beat M. O. Hoosen and A. K. Sufnad 6-2.

L. A. L. Silva and J. J. Remedios (Recreio) drew with Ismail and Madar 6-6; beat Curruem and Sufnad 6-4; beat Hoosen and Sufnad 6-2.

Dr. A. P. Gutierrez and E. A. Noronha (Recreio) lost to Ismail and Madar 4-6; beat Curruem and Sufnad 6-4; lost to Hoosen and Sufnad 1-6.

year and £10,500 per annum thereafter, with the option to the Company of purchasing the freehold within three years on favourable terms.

Boxing has a greater following in Great Britain than anywhere else in Europe, yet the most important contests cannot be promoted in London at the present time owing to the excessive expense involved in adapting the available covered arenas. It is obvious that a large covered stadium is an essential need, particularly in this country where uncertain weather conditions are so prejudicial to open air promotions.

It is hoped to stage in a small hall in the Stadium boxing contests twice weekly in order that young boxers may have the opportunity of becoming known to the press and general public. Ten years' promotion experience has convinced Jeff Dickson that this would be a valuable addition to the scheme.

BICYCLE RACING.

Although Britain was a Pioneer in this Sport, for lack of facilities (such as the Westminster Stadium will provide), this country has now lagged far behind other countries.

An indoor track permitting training and racing all the year round is essential to ensure the outstanding success which this sport has achieved as the Continent and in America.

With the provision of the Westminster Stadium England should again take its place in the forefront of the sport of bicycle racing. The popularity which this form of contest has achieved on the Continent is little short of phenomenal. At the Palais des Sports in Paris, at Brussels, and the Sport Palast in Berlin, crowds are frequently turned away from bicycle racing during the season from the beginning of October to the end of April.

Six days' Bicycle Races are promoted in New York, Boston, and Chicago twice each year; in Berlin, Brussels, and Paris once each year, and these performances are always outstanding sporting events, particularly in the case of the annual race at the Palais des Sports, Paris. It is confidently expected that Six Day Bicycle Races will prove among the most attractive features at the Westminster Stadium.

ICE HOCKEY.

Ice Hockey has often been described as the fastest and most thrilling team game in the world. It has made enormous strides in Europe in the last few years. The game has long had a vast following in Canada and the United States which are still the home of the best teams. Later, however, there has been a rapid development in the standard of play in Europe, and competition with representative Canadian and American teams for the Championship of the World is now keener than ever before.

Ice Hockey already commands an enthusiastic following in existing ice rinks in England, but none of those at (Continued on Page 7.)

In a spirit of adventure, six members of the Tungshan Swimming Club in Canton will set off for Hong Kong in a small sampan on August 1, according to a report. The party expects to reach the British colony within three days and to give the Chinese water polo team of this city a stiff battle upon their arrival.

They will remain in Hong Kong for two weeks, and then make a return trip to Canton.

HUGHES'S NET WORK

GIVES HIM THRILLING VICTORY AGAINST SUTTER.

THE QUEEN WATCHES FIVE HOURS
OF TENNIS

London, July 1.

The Queen came to Wimbledon to-day and watched the play on the Centre Court for some considerable time. Beside her was seated King Alfonso, and there were also present the Earl of Athlone and Princess Alice and Lord Admiral the Hon. Sir Alexander and Lady Patricia Ramsay.

Her Majesty left at 7.30, having spent nearly five hours watching the tennis.

The Queen's visit brought luck to England, although she did not actually witness the most important and most admirable victory gained by an Englishman so far in the course of this week. For it was on Court No. 1 that C. Sutter, who was placed fifth in order of merit among the seeded players, and is ranked as America's third best man, was beaten by G.P. Hughes, who has proved a mainstay of Great Britain in Davis Cup doubles in partnership with F. J. Perry, but is ranked officially below Austin, Perry, and Leo as a singles player and was not in consequence seeded.

I am told writes H. S. Scrivenor in the London Morning Post, that we do not know, or perhaps I ought to say have not seen, how good Sutter can be, that even when he beat von Cramm in that rousing match which they played on Thursday he was not at his best; but I believe that he and his country's other representatives were fairly confident of his ability to beat Hughes to-day.

RHYTHM.

He has nothing in the way of a forcible service; neither does he crack the ball, as Vines often does, so hard that you can almost hear it squeal; but he has learnt to perfection the art of hitting the ball quite reasonably hard and yet in such a rhythmic and easy fashion that his strokes are as sure as they are severe.

I think I may say at once that he had not this perfection of stroke production at his command yesterday, and could not tackle his task with the confidence with which he is ordinarily endowed; but all the same infinite credit is due to Hughes for the persistent way in which he made him hustle, and for the many (Continued on Page 7.)

Chinese Win
S'hai Tennis
League

KEEN STRUGGLE
IN DIV. 2

Shanghai, July 22.

With the first division Shanghai Lawn Tennis League championship now definitely decided in favour of the Chinese Tennis Club, interest is being centred on the race for the junior division title. By virtue of their overwhelming victory by 15 straight sets over the Association Sportif Francais squad, the Shanghai Recreation Club seconds placed themselves into a fine position in the standings.

The Rees have won 69 and lost 21 sets and are only 10 sets behind the Cercle Sportif Francais seconds, who have already played 120 sets to the Rees only 90. The Russian Tennis Club, who have only joined the local tennis family this year, are also in a good position with 72 sets won and 48 lost. A hard-fought will be staged by these three clubs in the next five weeks play terminating on August 23.

SENIOR LEAGUE TO END.

The senior division of the league is scheduled to be concluded next Wednesday and even if the Chinese drop all the 15 sets to the French Club representatives, they will still be crowned champions for the first time. The Shanghai Cricket Club have concluded their schedule of 120 sets with an average of 74 wins and 46 losses and unless the Nagai Wata Kaisha win more than 13 sets or the Club Lusitano the whole 15, they will cede the second position, while a hard fight will be staged for the third place.

AUSTRALIAN RUGBY XV

TO RECEIVE BONUSES WHILST IN ENGLAND

London, July 10. Members of the Australian Rugby League team, who left for England on July 4, will receive payment on a different basis from that of previous trips.

In addition to their allowance of £4 per week, payment will be on the basis of playing merit, attention to training, and conduct. Points will be allotted by the team managers at the end of every match, and when the tour is concluded, there will be a statistical chart, which will reveal what bonus each player is to receive. Points will be given on the following basis:—

- (1) The way players train on ship en route to England.
- (2) The way players train during the intervals between each match.
- (3) Any assistance rendered by players acting as masseurs, not participating in a match.
- (4) Allowance to players for being on the winning side.

losing side, or for drawn games.

(5) Allowance to players who are ready to participate in fixtures, but are not displaying form sufficient to enable them to take actual part in the matches.

OVERCOME ANOMALIES.

The adoption of this new system of payment, it is claimed, should tend to overcome many anomalies that have been obvious to managers during previous tours.

Almost every touring team develops its "tourists," yet, at the end of an arduous tour, those players who have borne the heat and burden of the games have received no more compensation for their efforts than those players who have failed to attend to their training.

It is not always the players fault that he finds himself unable to reproduce the form that warranted his selection in the touring side, but due allowance will be made for this failure in the next touring team.

ISLANDS DISPUTE

Nanking, July 26.

On the heels of the announcement that France has laid claim to nine islands in the China Sea and that Japan is seriously considering, contesting the French right of occupation, China is advancing the argument of sovereignty on her own behalf. The dispute over ownership of the territories has now assumed three-sided proportions.

Official circles here have expressed surprise at the official announcement from Paris yesterday confirming the French occupation of the little coral isles, which lie between Borneo and the Philippines. The islands are known in Chinese as the Sisha Group and are populated for the most part by Chinese fishermen. They have always been considered here as being under Chinese sovereignty.

The Ministries of Foreign Affairs and the Navy are jointly studying the matter before taking diplomatic action.—Reuter.

"No, sir."
"He said he would." The old doctor tapped his teeth with a pencil. "What's the matter with him these days, anyway? He doesn't know whether he's a foot or a horseback."

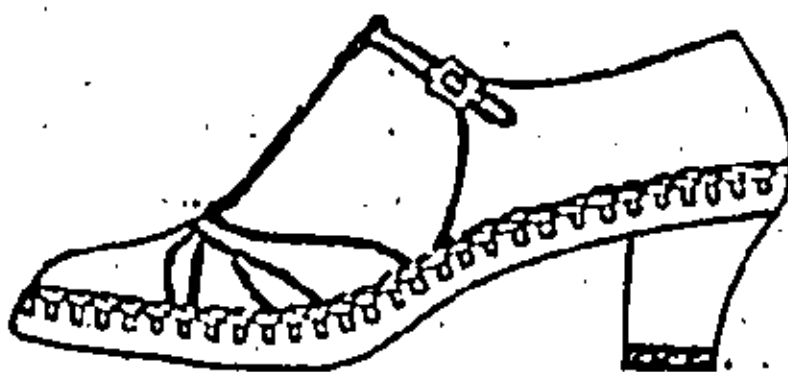

Monnie shrugged, trying to look detached.
"Ah, there he comes now!" Dr. Waterman struggled to his feet, his great bulk blocking her view of the window.

"Well, I'm too busy to see him now. Make him wait. Let him come in in 15 minutes. Do him good to cool his heels."

The door to his private office slammed. Monnie waited for Charles' ring, her heart beating faster. Why had the doctor so deliberately left them alone together?

She was nervous about having a tete-a-tete with Charles Eustace.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

Does the fact that you hold a definite number of high-card tricks necessarily fulfil the requirements for an original bid in the constructive one over one system?

Certainly not. As I have often stated before, distribution is just as important a factor in contract as high-card tricks.

As you know, in this system, a first or second hand original bid shows a very fine hand. The bidding can be opened with a much weaker third or fourth hand—especially third hand—therefore before making an original first or second hand bid you should say to yourself, "What will happen if I open the bidding with this hand and my partner responds with such and such a bid?"

If you are not in a position to handle that response, then don't make an original bid. It is far better to pass, and then on the second round make a highly constructive bid—or even a forcing bid—to show that your hand did contain a good number of high-card tricks but not the proper distribution for an original bid.

Take for example the following hand. South, the dealer, holds three and one-half high-card tricks. However, the hand is not well-balanced and therefore cannot be opened with an original bid of one no trump and it has no biddable suit, so it must be passed.

♠ K-8	♠ A-Q
♥ 8-6-2	♥ K-10-7
♦ 5-4-2	♦ 7-3
♣ A-K-9-4-3	♣ 9-6-3
	♣ J-8

West would also pass. North will open the bidding with one club. Some players with the East-hand would overcall with one spade. Personally I prefer the negative double, which gives a much better picture of your hand.

South now shows that he passed quite a strong hand by bidding two no trump. North will go to three clubs and South will then bid three no trump.

The Play

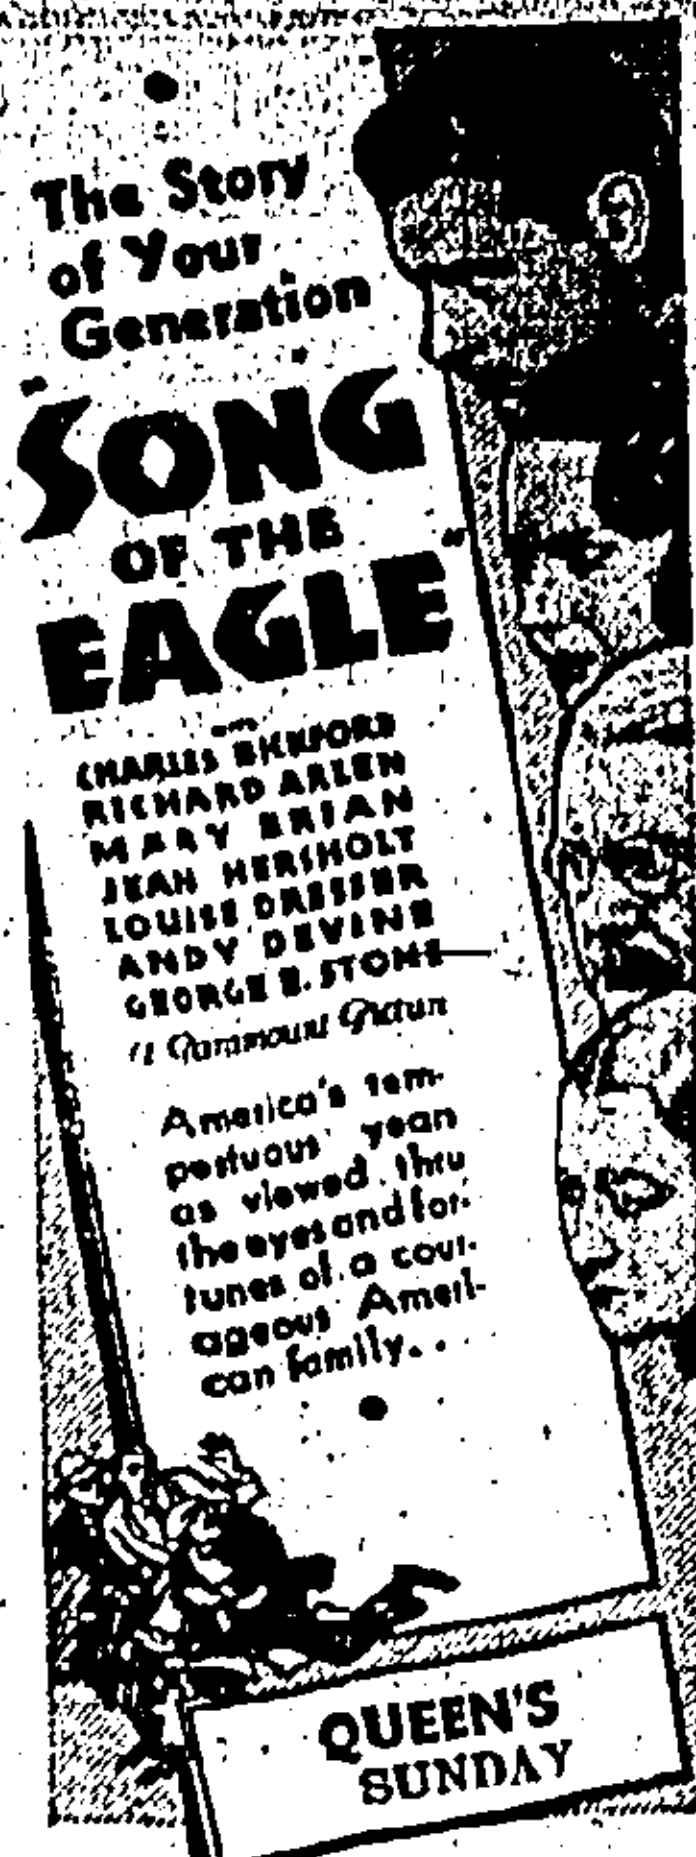

West has a choice of openings. He can lead his queen of diamonds or, as his partner has made a negative double showing strength in spades, his original lead can be the nine of spades. Without an apparent entry card, I believe I would prefer the nine of spades opening.

A small spade will be played from dummy, East will win with the queen and return the ace of spades. His next spade lead will be won by South with the jack.

South then leads a small club and wins in dummy with the king. He returns a heart and takes the finesse, locating the king.

Another club is played towards dummy. West plays the ten and the declarer must refuse to win the trick and should play the three from dummy.

If the declarer makes the mistake of going up with the king of clubs, he will then have to lead a small club which West will win with the queen, and the two clubs in dummy will be dead due to the fact that there is no entry there.

If declarer refuses to win the second club, all he must lose is three spades and the club trick, and he makes his contract of three no trump.

PEKING CHARGE

FENG TREATING WITH JAPAN

Peking July 26.
That Feng Yu-hsiang, leader of the Chinese forces which recently captured Dolonor, has sent agents to Manchuria to treat with the Japanese military officials at Mukden, is the charge made in an official Military Council communique issued this evening.

The communique states that Feng's agent, together with an agent representing Shih Yu-san, explained that the Christian General's occupation of Dolonor was not directed against the Japanese but was part of a move to overthrow the Central Government at Nanking.

After the success of this movement, Feng's agent is said to have declared that the northern warlord intended to establish a "Kungpen" Government or a government based on democratic principles, which would have endeavored to improve relations between China, Japan and Manchukuo.

The communique also states that the local authorities have received a despatch from Changhai public organizations alleging that Feng established a Communist form of government in Heilungting, Northeast Kalgan, where the young men and women were induced to organize themselves and spread Communist teachings.—Reuter.

CHINESE CONSTABLE CONVICTED.

ORDERED TO PAY FINE ON MISCONDUCT CHARGE

"He ought to explain in the witness box whether he is a fool or a knave" remarked Mr. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy yesterday afternoon, in answer to a submission made by the defending counsel, Mr. T. P. K. Kemble, that his client, Au Cheong-kit, P. C. C. 244, who faced a charge of misconduct, might be a fool but not necessarily a knave. The man was alleged to have extorted money under threat of arrest.

The case was adjourned from last Friday, and after the evidence for the prosecution had closed yesterday, Mr. Kemble said he did not think there was any purpose served by putting his client into the witness box, as he would only deny the accusation against him.

Counsel, in submitting that his client had no case to answer, said that there were two alleged acts of misconduct. One was that the defendant had not charged the complainant for possession of opium at the Central Police Station, and the other the alleged bribery. With regard to the second act, his submission was that the evidence was conflicting, and that the whole thing had been trumped up. With regard to the first act, he submitted that the proceedings at the No. 7 police station were purely informal, and even if they were meant to be formal the defendant did not understand they were formal. He submitted there was no order made to defendant at No. 7 to take the woman to the Central Station. He might be a fool but

FOREIGN COMPANIES.

BRITAIN CONSIDERING CHINA'S ORDER

London, July 26.
Capt. Anthony Eden, in reply to questions in the House of Commons to-day, said that the British Minister to China had presented a report concerning the Chinese Government's order for the registration of foreign companies, which was now under consideration by the Government.

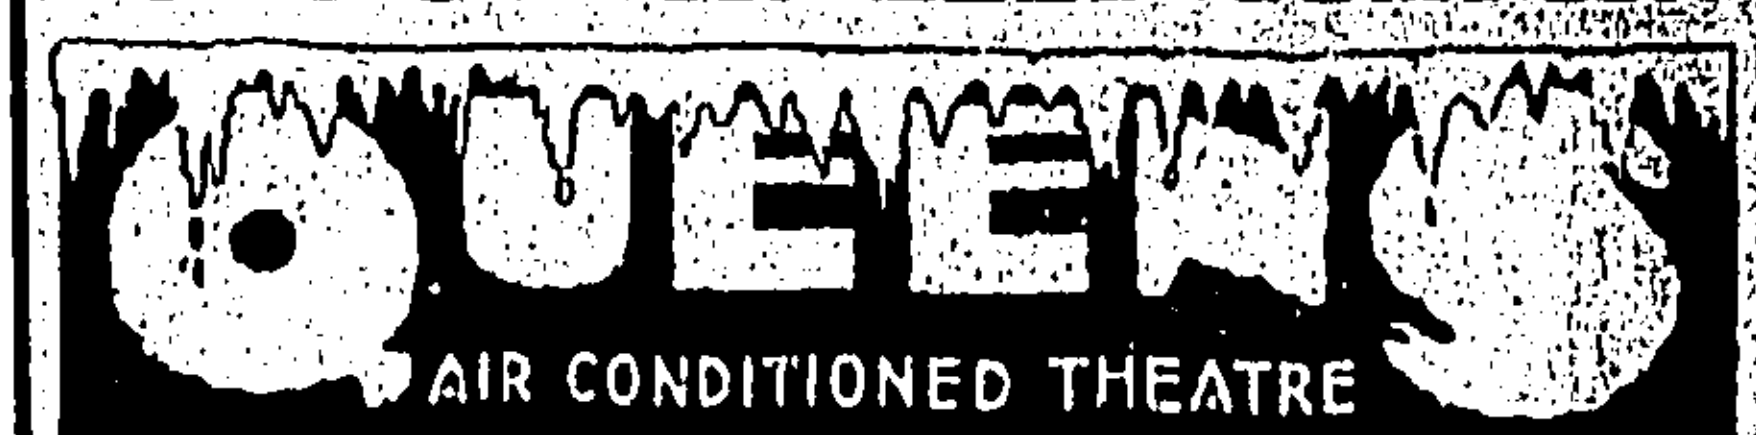

He was well aware of the importance of the order, and the fact that the regulations included a claim to the right of the Chinese Government demanding to retain for examination the books of the companies at any time.—Reuter.

was not necessarily a knave. Mr. Schofield, after making the aforementioned remark, decided to convict, and fined the defendant $100 or two months' hard labour.

Mr. Calthrop, A. S. P., prosecuting, said that defendant had a rather bad record. He had been fined $2.50 and reduced to the rank of a recruit this year after Departmental investigation on a charge of wilfully disobeying orders, and had been warned previously to this occasion.

The defendant was alleged to have taken a woman to No. 7 police station to lodge a charge of possession of opium, and when told to take the case to the Central Police Station had gone away with the woman, and had subsequently released her for a sum of $15, and not made a report at the Central Station. The woman made a report the following day, July 14, which led to the charge of misconduct being brought against the policeman.

"Abolish Honeymoons? NEVER!"

ner (right), advertising executive, answering Mary Borden's proposal that the ancient institution be abolished.Novelist's Startling Proposal Draws a Fiery Counter-AttackProminent Figures of Stage, Society and Business Rally to Defence of RomanceIn the preceding article, Mary Borden, London novelist, and others urged that the honeymoon be abolished. Here is an answering chorus of "Noes" from prominent figures of the stage, society and business.

By Julia Blanshard

Abolish honeymoons? NEVER!
That is the answer given by a quartet of famous folks to the
Borden, author of "The Technique
of Marriage!""Please don't do away with honeymoons," pleads Judith Anderson, well-known stage star, now
rehearsing for "Reunion in Vienna.""One by one, the romantic things in life are being done to death by stern realists," Miss Anderson maintains. "Why remove them all? Other things being equal, the honeymoon is an opportunity to start married life in an ideal realm which two people build
for themselves, away from familiar
scenes and familiar faces.""Honeymoons give couples a chance to make the adjustments
in temperament and disposition
that are necessary when two lives
are joined. Even if everything
does crumble later, at least there is the memory of the honeymoon.
But it shouldn't crumble, if the
honeymoon sees them off to a good start."A society woman, Mrs. George
Elliman, backs all that Judith
Anderson says on the subject.
Mrs. Elliman is a popular member of the younger New York-Long Island society clique. She was Natica de Acosta, niece of the late
Mrs. Philip Lydig, who was the beautiful Rita de Acosta."It is very wise for young couples to start their married lifewith a honeymoon," Mrs. Elliman asserts. "If they are really in love
with each other, as they should be,
the happiness they have had alone
together without any of the outside cares or worries is something
to remember always and look back
on with joy. Especially if they have been tired out with engagement parties and the wedding festivities, and the arrangements for their new home, they will be bliss-
fully happy to get away alone together in a completely new world
on their honeymoon.""If they are a couple with little money, they probably won't be able to have a vacation again for some time and the husband won't regret having spent the money he
did. If they are a wealthy couple,
they will be just as happy looking back on their honeymoon as the poorer couples because the rest of their lives may be so taken up with social activities that perhaps they,
too, won't have another vacation
together.""My advice is to take a honeymoon, by all means. Even if it doesn't turn out as well as you had hoped, you'll at least never have to worry about what you may have missed."Mrs. Geline MacDonald Bowman,
of Richmond, Va., president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs,
makes a plea for a honeymoon for
young couples—even if it is only
a short one."The psychological effect upon
a young couple who get away from the protection of parental roof andinterested friends, out into an environment where no one knows or cares about them, is a good experience to make them realize that they will need to stand alone in the world and work out their problems together in a world indifferent to their ultimate success or failure," is her reasoning."A short honeymoon, of something less than a week even, which has as its objective the return to establish a comfortable and happy
home where both enter actively
into the actual labour of preparation, is a good beginning for happiness," she continued."Joint labour makes each appreciate a home, leaves short time to dwell upon the little differences of
habits and tastes until working together to found the home blends
such differences into a happy combination, by mutual concessions.
A honeymoon is the best possible
start toward a happy marriage."One man comes forward with an emphatic opinion. Robert Buckner, prominent in the business and advertising field, is all
for honeymoons."The honeymoon," he explains,
"is an inescapable period of life,
or state of mind. When you grant
that marriage is a desirable state
of affairs but argue that the honeymoon is no way to begin it, your reasoning is like that of the dear
old maid who loved omelets but
"like other forms of sudden elevation from the earth, do produce
some tragedies, but what does the trip have to do with it? What ghastly horrors can travelling produce which can't be experienced at home? People make mistakes
without regard to scenery.""Abel Bonnard" made an observation that seems to me applicable. He said, "Between a man and a woman peaceful friendships
are founded on indifference, and troubled friendships on love." If then, the average honeymoon produces some friction and trouble, is

DARLING FOOL

by MABEL McELLION

CHAPTER XLIII

One day in late February, a day of premature spring, Monnie was walking along High street on her way home. Suddenly it seemed to her that the thaw had come to her heart as well as to all the brooks and rivulets. It was as if the pieces of a puzzle had fallen into place and she saw her life again in its true proportions. She had been frozen up since Dan's death, had not really believed in the coming of a warmer, happier time.

"Is it wrong to feel this way?" she wondered. Innocently. After all, in the eyes of the world, she had no right to mourn Dan. She must hide her sorrow and be secret about it. Sandra was his widow—and Sandra was far away by this time, seeking to reclaim her lost beauty.

But it was true that life had colour for Monnie again, had regained meaning all of a sudden, as if someone had "flung wide a case-moment," showing her a dim, remembered beauty.

"This is what it used to be like before—before I was in love with Dan," the girl confessed to herself. Every day then had been an adventure and a promise. She had taken pleasure in simple things, had laughed joyously at nothing. Then, almost without her knowing it, Dan had taken possession of her heart. She had lived only for the sound of his voice, for a chance sight of him in the street, for the hope of some further meeting with him. It had all been so unsatisfactory, so bitter, so sad. Nothing had come of it and here was she, almost 21, wondering what to do with her days.

The high clouds, seceding across a piteously blue sky, matched her mood. How strange, she thought a little sadly, Charles was these days. Before he had been her friend, always there, a very tower of strength to lean on. Now he seemed cold and distant. His manner with her was formal. He never "dropped in" casually any more, except when she was away. In Dr.

Waterman's office she heard of him casually. He was going home, going there. He appeared to be much in demand. His health was completely restored now, the doctor had told her, hinting, too, that Charles expected to move on shortly.

"He's getting restless here," the white haired, keen eyed old gentleman had remarked that morning. "He's perfectly fit and he wants to get back to his work."

Timidly Monnie had asked what that was. Charles had always been curiously reticent about it. Dr. Waterman had fixed her with a penetrating glance.

"Why, the boy's an architect and a very good one. Didn't you know that?" he had asked briskly. "Overworked and had to take a rest in the south of France. Some girl played hob with him over there. She was an American married to a title. Charles got into the papers—a duel or something. His nerves weren't mended. The boy was far from normal, really, and I wrote him to come here. I know this little town of ours would be good for him. And it has been. For a while I thought he meant to settle here. He talked of it but now he's changed his mind and wants to get back to New York. Perfectly natural, I suppose."

Again Monnie felt that queer little pang. The town would be strange, unfriendly almost, without Charles. She would miss him greatly.

"Hello."

"How are you?" He stood, staring down at her, his frown giving way to a smile.

"I'm well." Charles fell into step beside her.

"You look it." He gave her an oblique glance.

Monnie said, offhandedly, "I hear you're going away."

His face fell into grim lines again. "Who's been tattling?"

"Oh, I didn't know it was a secret," Monnie flushed, feeling resentful. Why would he behave like this? It was so stupid. She wanted to be his friend and he pushed her away.

"It's not exactly. Yes, I'm pushing along. Got to get back to work. I've loafed long enough."

It was on the tip of her tongue to say, "Why not work here?" But she curbed the impulse. Besides that would be a very silly thing to ask. Naturally his kind of job would take him to the big cities. He belonged there.

"Did you stop at the house?" she inquired a moment later, for want of something better to say. A half constrained silence had fallen between them.

"Yes, to see Kay about those dance tickets. She stopped by to ask if I wanted to buy some and I wasn't in. It's a benefit, I believe."

His voice, Monnie thought, softened when he spoke Kay's name. Well, that was all right. Charles and Kay would be a wonderful couple. Monnie had a cinema flash of herself, the maiden aunt, hovering over Kay's rosy children. "They say she used to be a pretty girl years ago." She suppressed a sigh but Charles caught the half uttered sound and whirled.

"You're not ill!" His voice seemed so accusing that Monnie almost jumped.

"No. What made you think so?" He stared down at her, almost angrily. "You're thinner—and so pale. It makes me—" he broke off, refusing to finish.

"Makes you what?" Curious how she longed to have him finish the sentence. But he set his lips tight and would not. He stalked on.

"Charles, you're tearing along so I can't possibly keep up with you." She was laughing but there were tears close to her eyes. Why was he so cross with her? What had she done?

"Sorry." But he didn't look it. His dark, handsome face was grim, unyielding.

"Won't you come in?" They were at the gate now.

"Thanks, no. I'd better not."

He lifted his hat and was gone.

Monnie caught her underlip between her teeth, feeling wounded. Her brief joy in the lovely day was destroyed. How tiresome one's friends were! How tiresome Charles, of all people! How incalculable were all men!

Next day, Dr. Waterman, black bag in hand, charged into the office where Monnie, fresh and crisp in a new white blouse and dark blue jumper, sat typing case records. Her bronze hair was tucked behind her ears in a fashion new and becoming. The old gentleman stood stock still for a moment, regarding her.

"Bless my soul!"

Monnie lifted her eyes, abstractedly. "I beg your pardon, doctor?"

He chuckled. "Just wishing I was young again. Wouldn't I have more gumption than those young fellows, though?"

She blushed, tucking an unruly curl out of the way.

"Isn't that a new outfit?"

"I've been wearing it for a week."

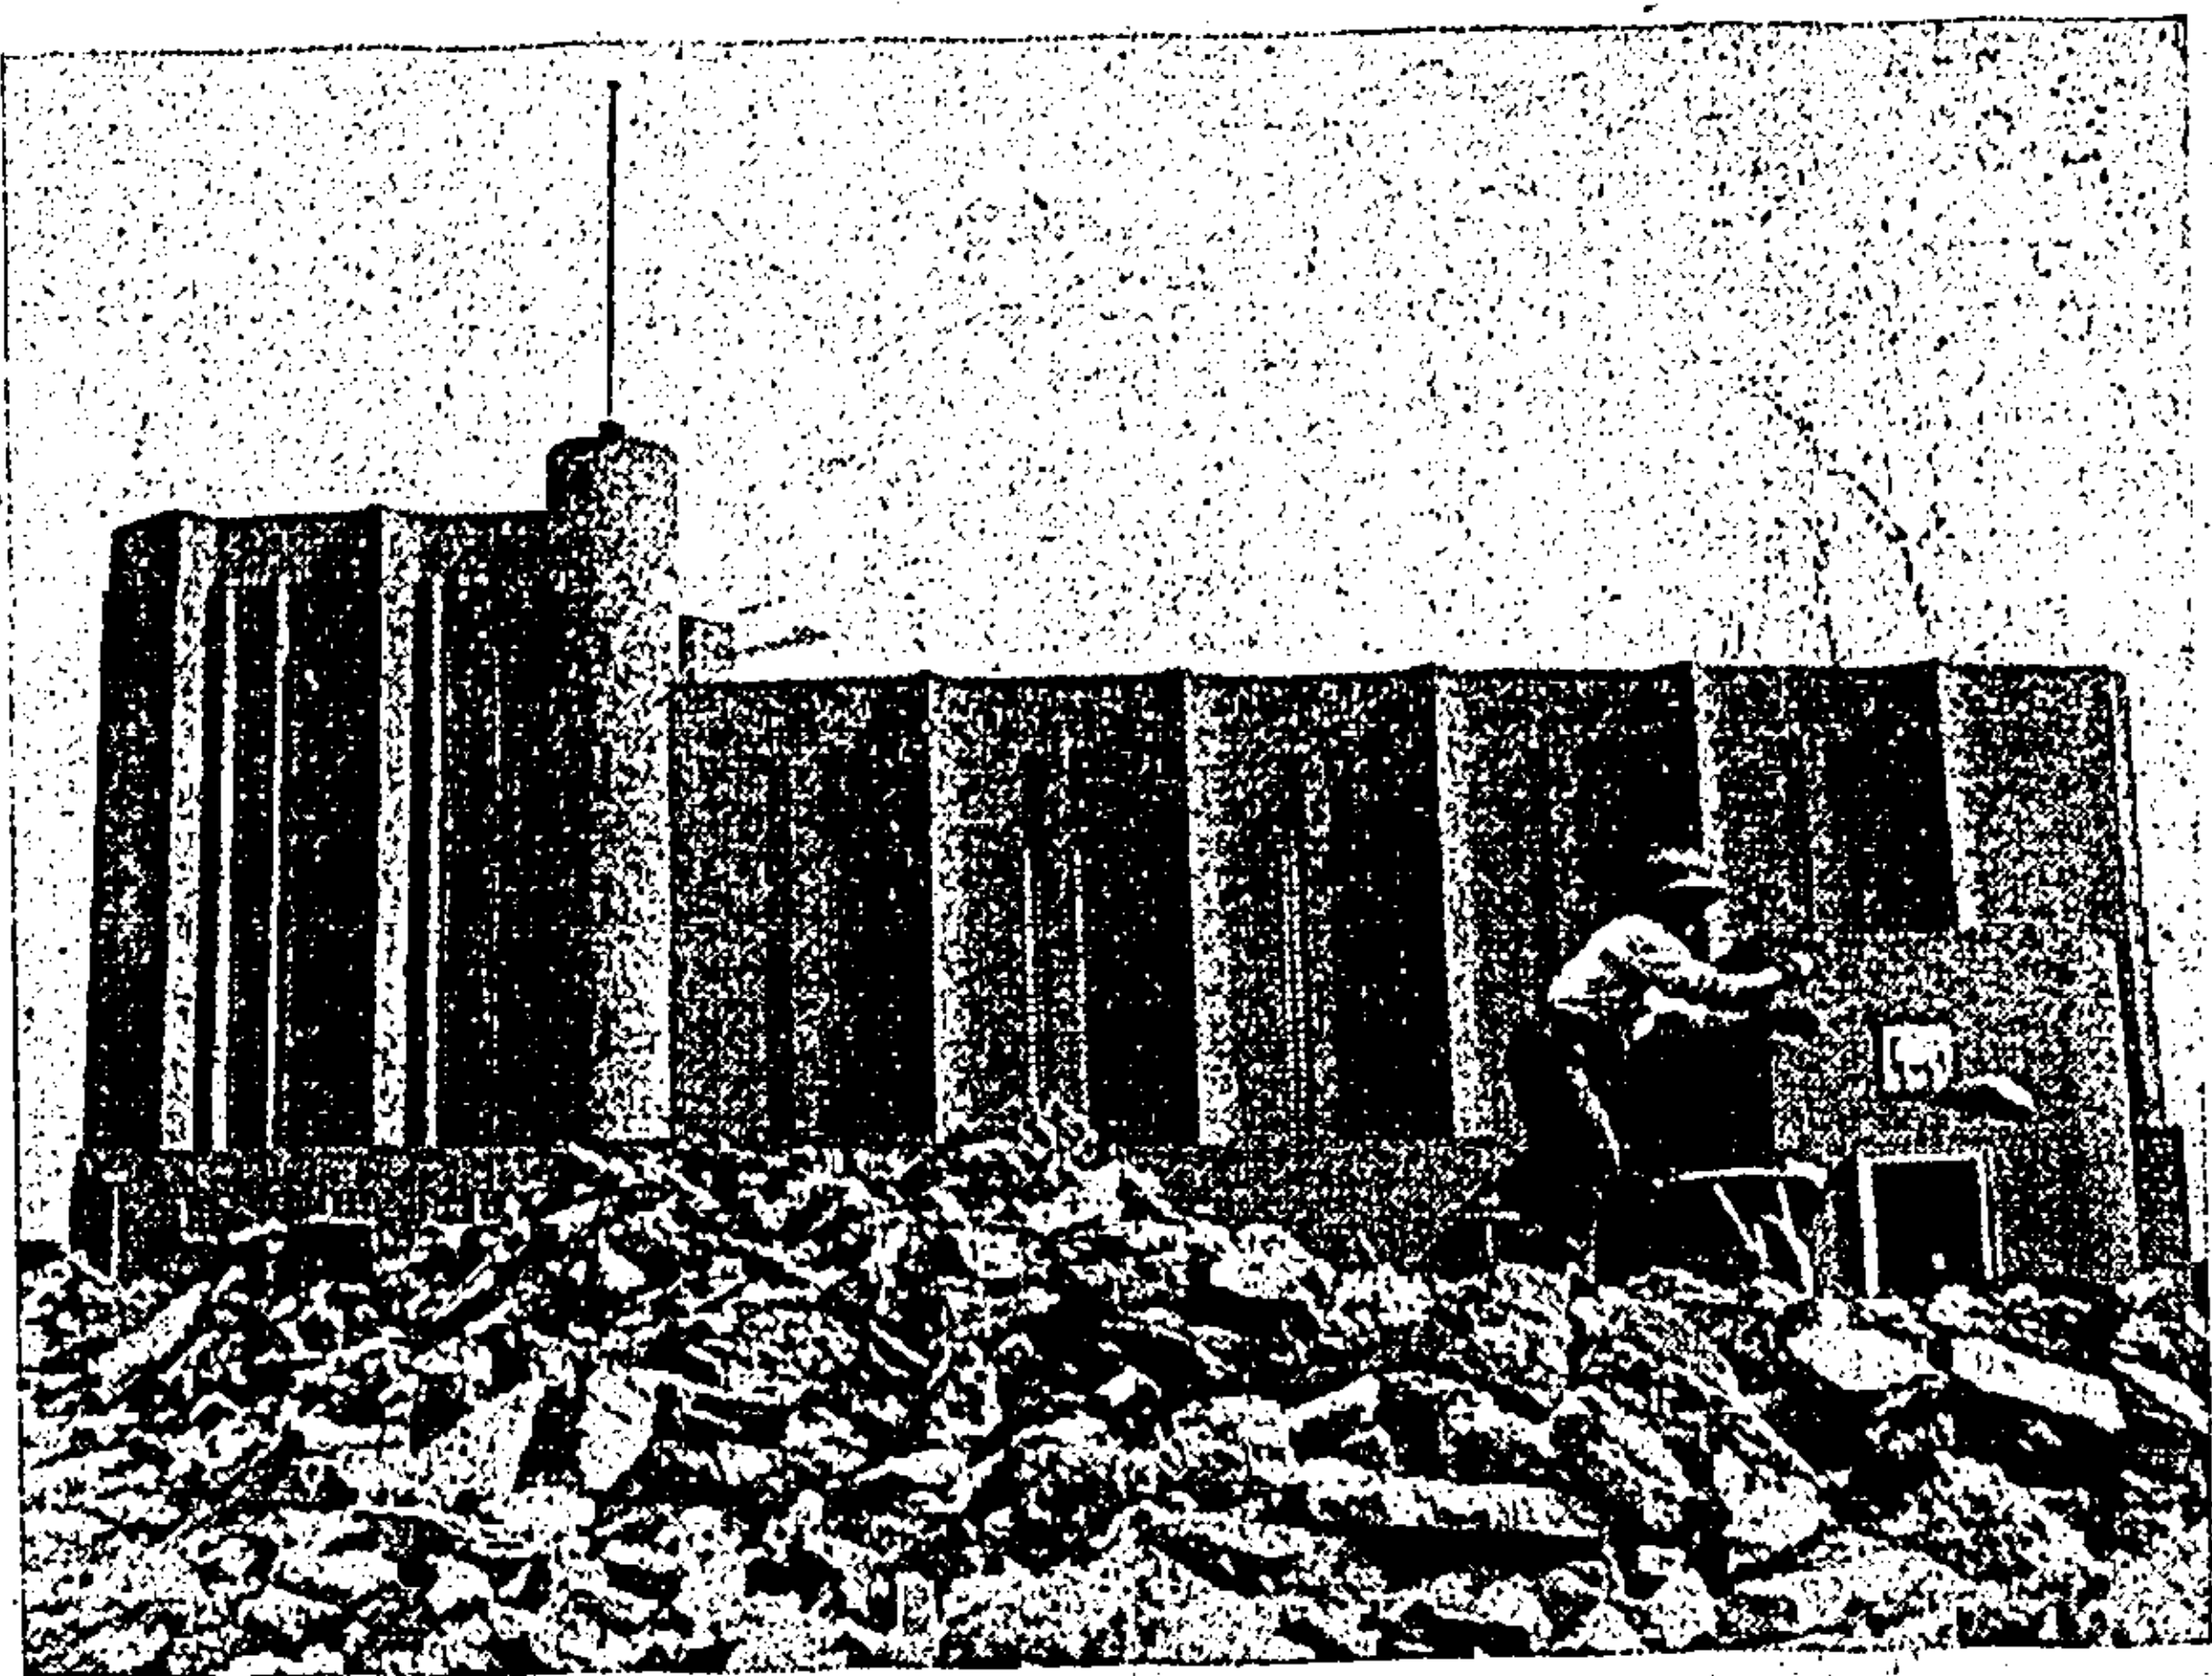

"Hum. Hum." He sat down, knitting his white brows, staring abstractedly at her flying fingers.

"Stop a minute, girl. You're like a whirlwind. I want to ask you something."

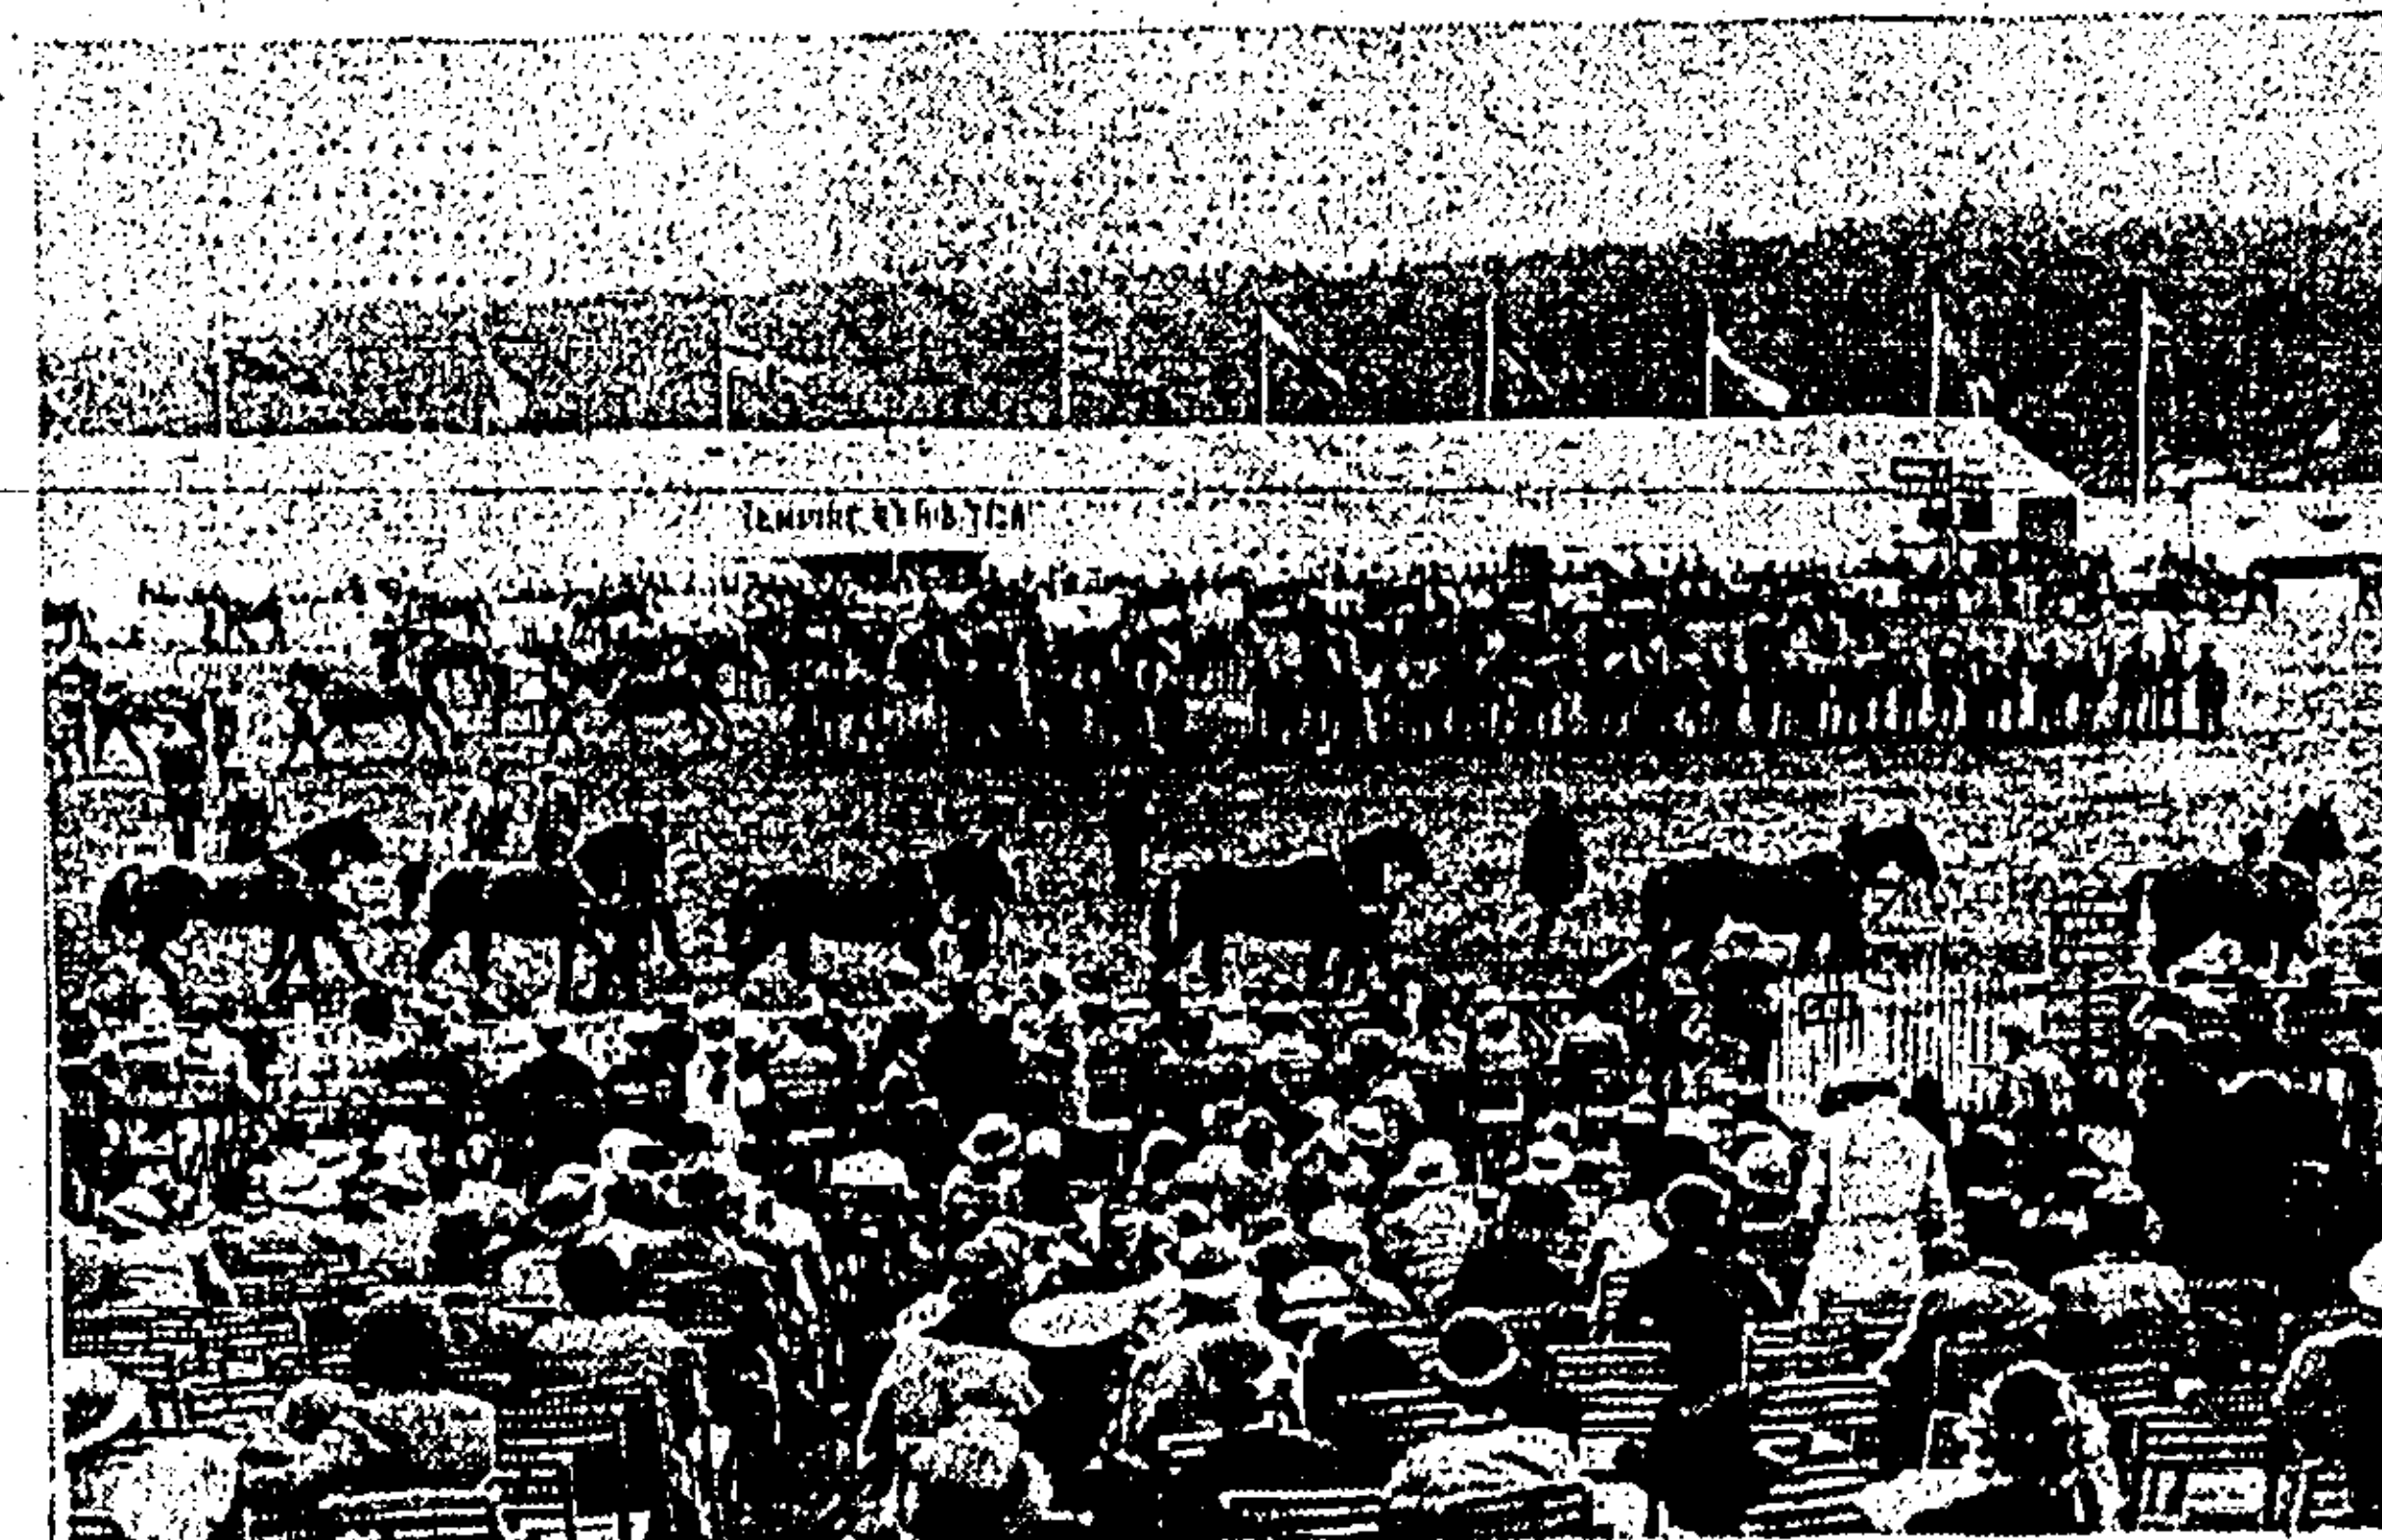

Obediently Monnie laid her hands in her lap.

DELEGATES HELD

THREE ARRESTED ON WAY TO PARLEY

Shanghai, July 26.
It is learned to-day that three out of five delegates from Korea, who planned to attend the World Anti-War Conference here, were arrested by Japanese police on the day of their arrival. The other two have mysteriously disappeared.

It is said that owing to the difficulty of getting a suitable place for the Conference, as the authorities of the French Concession, the International Settlement, and the Chinese City have all refused to allow the meeting to be held in these territories, the parley may be temporarily called off, but only until the situation is more favourable.

able. This latter report, however, cannot be confirmed, owing to the impossibility of communicating with Conference authorities, all of whom have maintained the strictest secrecy as to plans. Even the date of the proposed Conference was not fixed definitely. Madame Sun Yat-sen is said to be a moving spirit in the enterprise and delegates are expected from numerous countries.—Router.

How
Do You Sleep
These Nights

837 COILS—each in an individual muslin pocket—give instantaneous adjustment to the slightest movement. No other mattress has the same construction as the BEAUTY-REST.

Sleep as You Have Never Slept on SIMMONS Beautyrest

A good night's rest brings you a mysterious glowing something no beauty aids can match. Takes away every trace of fatigue from a woman's face.

But—a night of only part-way resting sleep leaves on your face lines you cannot hide.

Science says that really rejuvenating sleep comes only when every nerve and muscle can relax.

A lumpy mattress or a sagging one cannot give it to you. You may not realize the difference. But surely and steadily that difference is being written on your face.

There is a mattress that gives you this deep rejuvenating sleep—the Simmons BEAUTYREST.

All through this famous mattress are tiny coils of finely tempered steel, 837 of them! Each in its individual muslin pocket. They buoy you up. You feel no restriction. You can turn in your sleep without knowing it! Every inch of you gets gloriously relaxed!

Don't let another day go by without your seeing this famous mattress.

BRITAIN CONSIDERING CHINA'S ORDER

London, July 26.
Capt. Anthony Eden, in reply to questions in the House of Commons to-day, said that the British Minister to China had presented a report concerning the Chinese Government's order for the registration of foreign companies, which was now under consideration by the Government.

He was fully aware of the importance of the order, and the fact that the regulations included a claim on the right of the Chinese Government to demand to retain for examination the books of the companies at any time.—Router.

SIR ARTHUR SALTER

If there is any man who can rescue China from her financial morass it should be Sir Arthur Salter. Her people and friends will, therefore, welcome the news that he has accepted an invitation to act as adviser to the Nanking Government. Sir Arthur's profound experience of world economic and financial problems, and his previous knowledge of China's complex finances, should prove of inestimable value to-day when the usual budgetary difficulties are accentuated by the loss of revenue from Manchuria and heavy military expenditure. Sir Arthur is generally recognised as one of the finest financial brains in the world and his political wisdom is in no way inferior to his technical ability. In the latter field, if technical ability means a combination of the creative mind with the executive hand, there are not a dozen men in Europe to equal him. His remarkable book on "Recovery" reveals the trend of his thought on present-day economic problems and if he is able to persuade Nanking to work out his programme, on a smaller scale, naturally, that the conception of his book, it might serve the purpose not only of rehabilitating China's finances but also of setting an example to countries in a similar plight. That he is well fitted to be entrusted with such an experiment is beyond doubt. He was responsible for the bulk of the burdensome work which resulted in the financial reconstruction of Austria and Hungary, under League auspices, after the war. He is an example of the British civil servant at his best but with an outlook widened by a natural largeness of vision as well as by the experience garnered in the last fourteen years at Paris and Geneva, where he has done more perhaps than anyone else living to set a standard of what the "ideal international man" should be. His reputation is such that men trained by him at Geneva are always being plundered. Quesney went to the Bank of France and Jacobson to the National Economic Council in Sweden. If he only succeeds in keeping a few of China's financial leaders with the "Salter tradition" his work in China will be more than worth while.

NOTES OF THE DAY

The frequency with which police searching squads delay buses near the Police Training School suggests an enquiry as to whether this is really necessary. If the men are engaged on serious duty, little complaint can be offered, but if, as it sometimes appears, the object is merely to give training to new recruits, a method might be found which would cause less inconvenience. Buses are legally expected to run to a schedule and if the search is efficiently carried out delays of a minute and more occur. If the vehicles get away quickly, it merely means a duty too perfunctorily performed to be of any value. Better practice, if it is practice, could be provided by making use of a bus not employed on passenger services, putting recruit constables on board with concealed weapons, and setting another batch the task of finding them.

There are not lacking women of courage and foresight in the schools, and the retiring president of the Headmistresses' Association the other day was fearless in her castigation of the thoughts and manners of the present day. I want to see that courage and that foresight devoted to the adjustment of the girls' schools to the real needs of the pupils that throng them, for I am sure that a wider outlook is needed, and not in the education of girls only. Much of what I say will be true of boys, only more so.

THE EMPIRE FAIR

The replies to Mr. M. F. Key's Empire Fair questionnaire are both encouraging and helpful and show that the inquiry was well worth while. The desire expressed that, in future fairs, steps should be taken to regulate the attendance will be generally endorsed. Apart from this, little criticism is forthcoming. The consensus of opinion among those obviously in the best position to judge is that a distinct value attaches to the holding of an annual Fair; most exhibitors are in favour of confining it to Empire commodities; the desirability of enclosing the Exhibition in a single area is stressed; and most firms agree that to expect the organisation to be carried out entirely by willing volunteers is asking rather too much. In short, some very sound suggestions are advanced regarding future arrangements. It says much for the way in which the Fair has been run during the last two years that an opportunity to "say a few words" found commentators content to make constructive proposals.

THOSE ISLANDS

France seems likely to draw a small hornet's nest about her ears by laying formal claim to those islands in the China Sea, although the most astonishing thing about the business is that there should be any islands with their ownership unsettled. We thought that all the land-grabbing that could possibly be done was efficiently performed many years ago. The sudden interest taken by Japan, the Philippines and China is amusing in a way. If the Japanese reports regarding the number of times since 1918 that the Tokyo Government have been asked to make a formal claim are accurate, someone must be heartily kicking himself to-day.

HYDRONALUM

Germany, which did so much to give aluminum its place in the modern world, has now prepared a new light-weight metal which has all the advantages and none of the defects of aluminum. It is called hydronalium and has been prepared at the works of the I. G. Farbenindustrie, Germany's famous dye trust. Though light in weight and strong, aluminum and its alloys "corrode" under certain weather conditions. They are particularly affected by sea water, while rain and certain forms of dampness also cause damage. As a result, they must be continually recoated with special paints to prevent serious damage to the whole construction. None of these disadvantages are present in hydronalium, it is claimed. It is an alloy of aluminum, magnesium and a very small part of manganese. It differs from other alloys in that it does not need to be worked in heat. Under certain conditions it may be welded, though, up to the present, the different parts of any construction of hydronalium have been riveted together. Manufactured in various degrees of hardness, it can be transported in plates of two millimeter thickness and upward.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH GIRLS' SCHOOLS

By DR. CYRIL NORWOOD
(Headmaster of Harrow)

It is very bold on the part of a mere man to write about girls' schools; for though I count among my ancestors just as many women as any schoolmistress my sex debar me from speaking either with wisdom or with knowledge. There are excellent women who regard the girls' school as the ladies of Rome regarded the mysteries of Bona Dea, and hold it to be an educational rite in which no male should take part on pain of death. Still, I had a mother; I have daughters; I am more or less a governor of several girls' schools: I have looked at the outside of them at prizegivings innumerable. I will be bold, and say what I think.

There are not lacking women of courage and foresight in the schools, and the retiring president of the Headmistresses' Association the other day was fearless in her castigation of the thoughts and manners of the present day. I want to see that courage and that foresight devoted to the adjustment of the girls' schools to the real needs of the pupils that throng them, for I am sure that a wider outlook is needed, and not in the education of girls only. Much of what I say will be true of boys, only more so.

EXAM. HANDICAP.
For one of the commonest things which you hear said by thoughtful headmistresses at the present time is that there are large numbers of girls to whom they cannot give the right education, the education best for them, because of the examination system, the demands of matriculation, and the bonds of tradition in which education is tied up. Only they never seem to say, either collectively or individually, what the right education is.

Now, I am all for making examinations our servants and not our masters: I am all for putting matriculation into the university compound, where it ought to be, and locking the gate on it. But I do want to know more clearly what we are going to put in its place, and nobody talks about that.

TRUE OBJECTIVE.
It is human to have prepossessions, and headmistresses are human. When the great movement of high school education began, the boys' schools were dominated by a narrow curriculum leading logically to the university and nowhere else. The pioneer women in the teaching profession took over the system entire for their primary concern was not to devise the best education for women but to demonstrate their intellectual equality with men. They were probably right in so doing.

But much water has flowed under bridges since that date, and what the women then set out to show has been abundantly proved, so far as it can be proved.—There is no subject in which some women will not be as good as the best men at the stage of school or university work. But, this having been demonstrated, it is not time to turn to what ought to be the real objective, and not send out quite so many girls who are fitted to do what boys ought to do, and do it very well, but who are by no means particularly fitted to do what girls ought to do?

Moreover, we hear a good deal nowadays about juvenile unemployment; and perhaps without sharing Hitler's determination to confine women once again to the provinces of children, cooking, and church, one may be justified in hazzarding

The Very Idea!

LETTERS TO A SELF MADE COLONIAL

Stolen & Censored by Eddie Kelly.

SOME time ago we were fortunate enough to acquire a series of letters written by a new-chum Colonial to his Girl Friend at Home.

Fully aware of the dangers and evils that lurk around the corner, ever ready to pounce upon and ensnare the unwary newcomer, we printed several of the letters as a warning to others.

Our Colonial, who shall remain nameless, has received a batch of replies from his Girl Friend. They were done up with blue ribbon when we found them and, as he's been on a bender for the past week, he won't miss the one we've borrowed.

London, June 22.

Pete, darling:
Your last letter terrified me. I feel sure, sweetheart, that you are running into danger in that terrible Hongkong. Whatever you do, Pete, my pet, look after yourself, and stay away from those awful cabarets. I've seen them in the talkies, and the Hongkong papers you sent me are full of the terrible doings and carrying ons. Darling, I don't want you to become one of those gigolos. I am so glad that the drought is over, dear, and that you don't have to go thirsty any longer. I think the Hongkong government was absolutely callous and immoral the way they made everybody put their names on chits before they could get a drink. You didn't explain what a chit was, dear, so I looked it up in the dictionary, which says a chit is a girl or a woman who is regarded as little more than a chit.

Were those Chinese girls, Pete? I felt just a teeny weeny bit jealous when you told me about all the chits you had got. I hope, dear, that you are being good.

I suppose now that the water shortage is over you don't have to go out to that terrible Peninsula to assuage your thirst. I had a look at the map of Hongkong the other day, but there was no Peninsula marked on it.

I'm sure your friend, Mr. Kelly, must be a nice man. It was so kind of him to look after you when you first arrived in Hongkong, and when I come out to join you, dear, I want to meet him. He is a brave man to face those shroffs the way he does. Does he have any chits, dear? I think, from the way you write, that he is much too nice to bother about women, especially the chit type.

Darling, I know how hard it is to get home comforts out in the Far East, so in case you feel cold, I have knitted you a sweater, two pairs of woollen socks, and a pair of woollen gloves, which I want you to wear whenever you venture out of your hut. Always wear flannel next to the skin, dear, and keep your throat muffled up against those typhoons. I have wrapped the woollen things around a bottle of lime-juice, which is good for the blood. Whenever you get some water from that mean Hongkong government, put a little lime-juice in it.

I hope the Pando doesn't pilfer the parcel when he's trokking across the desert with it. How often does he call at your village with mail?

Darling, this is all I can write now. Give Mr. Kelly my address so that he can write to me if anything ever happens you. Ever yours—

AN APOLOGY

We admit now that our action was totally undignified. We should not have thrown that bottle at him. At least, not before it was empty.

But a man is inclined to lose his temper in this climate, and in moments of passion, does things that he's sorry for afterwards. We hope Pete will accept this apology in the spirit with which it is given. It was our last bottle of beer, too.

But there you are. In Hongkong humidity and humidity don't mix. There's an "I" of a difference between them. Besides, Pete needn't have been so nasty about that ten bucks we've owed him. We owe lots of better men than he is, more than we were ever able to squeeze out of him. Still, we're sorry. Hongkong people have a lot to put up with. What with summer, the cabaret evil, shroffs, chits, people who write blistering letters to the papers, all this mystery about the date of the opening of the Hongkong Brewery, and a thousand and one other pin-pricks, life sometimes isn't worth living.

When we throw that bottle at Pete, he took us too seriously. Only shroffs should take us seriously in Hongkong. We're sorry about that beer.

"Well, let's not stand here and argue. Do I get a kiss or don't I?"

"MAY PROVE A GREAT SUCCESS"

THE CONFERENCE FUTURE

London, July 26.
Remarking on a debate on public work expenditure in the Commons to-night the Chancellor of the Exchequer repudiated the suggestion that the adjournment of the World Conference was synonymous with its conclusion or completion.

It is clear that the conference was obliged to adjourn without being able to tackle the most important part of the agenda because conditions intervened just as the conference began which made it impossible at present to continue the discussions usefully upon some of the most important points.

He entirely agreed that in the circumstances in the United States recently, it was impossible for that Government to contemplate the temporary stabilisation of their currency.

He saw no reason to assume that there should not be a reassembly of the conference when changed circumstances enable the countries again to discuss the currency question in an atmosphere of tranquillity.

U. S. EXPERIMENT.
He still believed that the attainment of full national prosperity was dependent on the restoration of international prosperity.

But the United States was trying an experiment on a gigantic scale of extraordinary interest. Conditions there were more favourable for its success than they would be anywhere else.

He reminded the House that President Roosevelt had had to face a reduction of wages far greater than had taken place here. It might be that the experiment would be a great success.

EMPIRE CURRENCY.
In reply to a suggestion which was made during the debate for an Empire Currency Union, Mr. Chamberlain pointed out the difficulties ascertaining the right relation between the various Empire currencies and sterling.

It was not a part of the policy of this country to link sterling either to gold on the one hand or to the dollar on the other. We must continue to pursue our own course independently in the interests of this country and of the Empire.

Referring to public works, he reviewed the schemes already undertaken and said the Government were constantly searching for directions in which they could in any way stimulate industry and restart the wheels.—British Wireless.

HELPING JEWS

COMMONS EULOGY OF PROF. EINSTEIN

London, July 26.
Professor Einstein was in the House of Commons gallery when Commander Locker Lampson introduced the nationality of Jews Bill, designed to promote and extend citizenship in Palestine of Jews deprived of citizenship elsewhere.

Referring to the persecution of the Jews Commander Lampson said some of the most learned and patriotic citizens of Germany had been driven out that country including Professor Einstein, generally admitted as the world's most eminent man of science. England was proud to afford him shelter at Oxford.—British Wireless.

CONSTABLE'S LOST REVOLVER

CONVERSION CHARGE WITHDRAWN

Tsang Shum, a constable attached to the Aberdeen police station, remanded last week on charges of having by neglect lost a .38 revolver, holster and 6 rounds of ammunition, and of having same to his own use, was fined $50 or one month's hard labour on the first charge by Mr. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning. The second charge was withdrawn by Mr. Grant, A. S. P.

The defendant had said that while he was asleep somebody stole the revolver and holster, which he had taken off and had put by his side on the bed.

AN IMPUDENT EMBEZZLER

INFORMS VICTIM OF HIS ACT

COURT STORY

A man's impudence in writing to his employer to inform him that he had absconded with $1,310 was related in Court this morning when Wong Man-yu was charged with embezzlement.

The miscreant failed to evade arrest and was brought back from Canton to stand his trial before Mr. Schofield at the Central Magistracy. He was sentenced to three months' imprisonment.

Sub-Inspector Nolloth said the defendant was employed by the manager of the On Man Garage in October, 1931, as a shoof and supervisor of the other workmen. He received a monthly salary of $25. His duty was to collect money for the cars stored in the garage, as well as money in payment of oil and petrol. He sometimes collected as much as $500 a month, and these sums were returned to the manager either weekly or daily.

On March 30 the manager asked him to collect some outstanding accounts before the Dragon Festival. On the day before the festival he was asked whether he had collected this money, and replied he had not.

The following day he absconded to Canton, and from there wrote to the manager saying he had collected about $1,310 and had gone to Canton.

The manager went to Messrs. Lo and Lo and a warrant was issued for accused's arrest. He was duly brought back to Hongkong.

Sub-Inspector Nolloth acknowledged that for such a responsible position his pay was very small.

ROBBERY WITH VIOLENCE

MAN ARRESTED AFTER THREE MONTHS

A robbery at No. 91, Connaught Road, 1st. floor, on April 5 had a sequel before Mr. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning, when Tsang Wai, alias Chan On, was charged with having robbed Chan Chung-chuen, with violence.

Two other men are alleged to have assisted the defendant at the robbery, but they have not been apprehended.

An application for one week's formal remand made by Detective Sub-Inspector O'Donovan was granted.

Knocked down by a hire car in Hennessey Road, Wanchai, a Chinese named Shiu Shing was admitted to the Government Civil Hospital yesterday with serious head injuries.

A fine of $100 was imposed on Li Pang, a travelling trader, when he was charged this morning before Mr. Butters at the Kowloon Magistracy with placing unmanifested cargo on the s.s. Taiyuan. Sergeant Illiff said defendant had five cattles of birds' nest, intending to take them to Swatow.

Arrested coming off the Tai Hing wharf with 50 tins of prepared opium concealed in the false bottom of a bucket containing onions, Ho Cho-lin, a married woman, was fined $3,000 or nine months' hard labour by Mr. Schofield, at the Central Magistracy this morning. A man, Chun Ying, was also charged, but pleaded not guilty, and Revenue Officer Grimmett said he would accept the plea. He was discharged.

TURNIPS AS MONEY

GAMBLERS STAMPEDE BEFORE POLICE

Pieces of turnip, each used to represent ten cents, were produced before Mr. Wynne-Jones in the Central Police Court this morning, when a fishmonger was charged with running a gambling school on the ground floor of the Central Market, and with ten others, gambling at pai kau.

Detective-Sergeant Moran and a Chinese detective, raided the market yesterday morning and found between 30 and 40 gamblers, all foks. The appearance of the officers was the signal for stampede, and only eleven were arrested.

First defendant denied the charge of keeping, while the rest admitted gambling.

Detective Lau Tak said he saw the second defendant win 40 cents from the third accused as a result of the first defendant gained four cents commission. When searched at the charge room, he had six copper cents.

The magistrate—You can play pai kau without commission. Sergt. Moran—The ordinary game of banker is similar to pai kau. With such a large number of gamblers I should have thought the first defendant would have had more than six cents in his possession.

Replying to the magistrate, witness said a piece of carrot represented the same money value as a piece of turnip.

Det. Sergt. Moran—The information was to the effect that a professional gambler was running this school.

First defendant was discharged on the charge of keeping but was convicted of gambling, and fined $2. A similar fine was imposed on the rest of the defendants.

Only 70 cents was retrieved from the table—a fish tub cover—and this was placed in the poor box.

CROWD STONES CONSTABLE

SCENE IN WELLINGTON STREET

Whilst taking a Chinese woman and a boy to the Central Police Station yesterday, an Indian constable was surrounded by a crowd in Wellington Street and pelted with stones and pumpkins. In the confusion the boy escaped but later appeared outside the Charge Room and was caught.

On appearing before Mr. Wynne-Jones in the Central Police Court this morning, the woman, charged with hawking vegetables without a licence, rolled up her jacket sleeve and showed a bruise on the right arm. She also complained of being struck on the back by the constable.

The constable said the two defendants were hawking close to each other, and arrested both. In Wellington Street a crowd collected and he blew his whistle. A Chinese policeman came to his assistance and accompanied him to Hollywood Road and then returned to his beat.

Questioned about the woman's injury, the witness said she was probably struck with a stone. Magistrate—If she had been struck on the arm with a stone she would have given a sharp cry.

Constable—On the way to the station she was crying loudly. Magistrate—You would have heard a sharp cry.

Constable—When she was hit on the arm she cried.

Magistrate—You are lying. I had to put it in your mouth to say she gave a sharp cry when struck by a stone.

The woman—After he gave me a blow he offered me two dollars

EXCELSIOR RESTAURANT FAILURE

PUBLIC EXAMINATION OF PROPRIETOR

QUESTION OF A PROSECUTION

The public examination of Pura Chand, aged 50, of 98, Parkes Street, Kowloon, and proprietor of the now defunct Excelsior Restaurant in Des Voeux Road, was adjourned at the Bankruptcy Court this morning after Mr. F. C. E. Rendall had suggested the possibility of a prosecution.

Mr. Rendall represented two Chinese shroffs who were employed by debtor at the Excelsior Book Store and who paid to him $500 each as security. The money had not been returned and in reply to questions Pura Chand stated that he had paid it into his banking account with other monies but had not refunded it owing to "hard times."

Mr. Rendall: I ask for prosecution on this statement, My Lord. He admits receiving this trust money.

The Chief Justice: He does not admit any intention to defraud. I leave it to your parties to take their own action.

EXCELSIOR BOOKSTORE.

Debtor gave evidence that he had been in the Colony for 10 years and had worked as overseer and foreman for the Hongkong and Shanghai Hotels, the Hongkong Construction Company and others. In 1926 he joined Messrs. Gomes, Blok, and Gularia in forming the Excelsior Book Store bringing in $2,000 to make a total capital of $5,000. In 1929 two of the partners left and were paid out and in 1932 Gularia went to India leaving him in sole charge. Apart from rent the liabilities incurred were between $2,000 and $3,000.

On March 29 last he opened the Excelsior Restaurant at a cost of about $17,000 of which he paid about $7,000, incurring the remainder in debt. For the first month he took $3,000, the second month $2,000, and for the last 18 days about $1,000. He attributed his failure to pressure of creditors while he was away in Canton having treatment for a bad heart.

The Official Receiver (Mr. E. L. Agassiz): The present position is that your unsecured creditors will get practically nothing as the whole of your assets will be swallowed up in preferential claims, rent, and bankruptcy expenses.

Mr. Rendall then examined debtor and the proceedings were adjourned.

MONEY LENDER LOSES $2,000

CROWN SILK STORE BANKRUPTCY

A Receiving Order against the Crown Silk Store was made at the Bankruptcy Court this morning by the Chief Justice, Mr. J. R. Wood. Nehal Chand said the proprietor of the Store, Tekchand Bohomall, went to Java 15 months ago and letters informing him of the bankruptcy had not been answered.

Inda Singh, a registered money lender, said the firm owed him $4,400 on a judgment obtained in court. His actual cash loss was $2,200 excluding interest. To his knowledge the assets of the company were $2,500 which had been paid into court, and the approximate liabilities were $9,000.

compensation but I would not have it. The hearing was adjourned until to-morrow for the evidence of the Chinese constable.

HONGKONG DISPLAY
IN LONDON

GREAT IMPROVEMENT AT IMPERIAL INSTITUTE

Sometime ago the Imperial Institute wrote to the Hongkong Government asking for assistance towards improving the Hongkong Court at the Institute. The Government obtained the co-operation of the General and Chinese Chambers of Commerce and as a result a typical range of Hongkong manufactures were sent to London, each exhibit being adorned by Chinese signs of an ornamental character.

In addition, a number of photographs of the Colony and of various native manufactures are being taken by Mr. J. C. M. Grenham and these will be sent at a future date.

Mr. H. W. Bird, a former resident in Hongkong, has interested himself in the project and in a letter to the General Chamber of Commerce just to hand states that the additions have improved the Hongkong Court immensely.

MANAGING DIRECTOR

Further particulars in regard to the proposed Westminster Stadium, the "Madison Square Garden of London," are to hand since the first announcement of the project made recently in the Telegraph.

According to the prospectus of the Westminster Stadium, Ltd., the stadium is to be under the personal management of Jeff Dickson, the famous sports promoter, and its aims are to provide facilities for boxing, bicycle racing, ice hockey, skating, wrestling, lawn tennis, athletics, gymnastics, fencing, badminton and other sporting events. It will be a covered arena.

The Stadium will also be available for Circuses, Exhibitions and Shows of all kinds, Balls, Conferences, mass Political and other meetings. The design of the Stadium will permit of its being adapted for any of the above purposes without the loss of a single

100 YEARS OF
CELEBRATEEXCHANGE OF MEMENTOS

London, July 1.

The hundredth cricket match between Eton and Winchester began on Agar's Plough at Eton to-day, and was marked by an interesting ceremony in front of the pavilion.

The Provost of Eton (Dr. M. R.
James) handed to the Warden of Winchester (Mr. Oswald Simpkin) a silver cup as a token of friendship.

In reply, the Warden of Winchester presented the Provost with a model of one of Winchester's 17th Century tankards.

The trophies were passed on to the captains of the teams.

The following telegram was received from Lord Hailsham, President of the M.C.C.:

"The Marylebone Cricket Club congratulate the two great schools on playing their hundredth match in friendly rivalry and send best wishes."

The Provost stated that even more far-reaching than the exchange of these tangible memorials of a hundred contests was to give heartfelt expression to the friendly feeling which united their beloved schools. He spoke of the love and reverence which Eton had for Winchester, and added,
"might those kindly feelings continue as unbroken as the series of matches."

ROBOT BATSMEN.

The Warden of Winchester said that a century was a small span in the life of the two great schools, but it made them wonder what would happen in another hundred years.

Maybe, he said, the game would be played with mechanised bat-men with a ball directed by invisible rays, and with a cine camera instead of umpires. He hoped, however, that there would be the same interchange of hospitality between host and guest, which was the most important thing of all.

TED PHELPS IS
"FED UP"Gives Sculling
Once-Over

London.
Ted Phelps is finished with being a world's champion.
He has rowed all his challengers off the river and now there is no one who cares to quibble about his world's sculling title.

Consequently he is unable to make a living. When a venturesome promoter suggests a match the terms are so unfair to Phelps that he has decided it is better to stay at home.

Now he has found a more profitable role.

When a new pleasure steamer
Tamar Belle left Westminster Pier for Kew the other day it had Phelps as captain.

"I am fed up waiting for a sculling race for my title," he said.
"I'd sooner be in singlet and shorts on the river at Putney or anywhere else—but there seems little chance of a championship race."

"I have an offer to race H. R.
Pearce at Toronto late in the summer but the terms are quite unsuitable. I am ready to defend my championship on the Thames against anyone, at any time."

year and £10,500 per annum thereafter, with the option to the Company of purchasing the freehold within three years on favourable terms.
Boxing has a greater following in Great Britain than anywhere else in Europe, yet the most important contests cannot be promoted in London at the present time owing to the excessive expense involved in adapting the available covered arenas. It is obvious that a large covered stadium is an essential need, particularly in this country where uncertain weather conditions are so prejudicial to open air promotions.

It is hoped to stage in a small hall in the Stadium boxing contests twice weekly in order that young boxers may have the opportunity of becoming known to the press and general public.
Ten years' promotion experience has convinced Jeff Dickson that this would be a valuable addition to the scheme.

BICYCLE RACING.

Although Britain was a Pioneer in this sport, for lack of facilities (such as the Westminster Stadium will provide), this country has now lagged far behind other countries.

An indoor track permitting training and racing all the year round is essential to ensure the outstanding success which this sport has achieved on the Continent and in America.

With the provision of the Westminster Stadium, England should again take its place in the forefront of the sport of bicycle racing. The popularity which this form of contest has achieved on the Continent is little short of phenomenal. At the Palais des Sports in Paris, at Brussels, and the Sport Palast in Berlin, crowds are frequently turned away from bicycle racing during the season from the beginning of October to the end of April.

Six days' Bicycle Races are promoted in New York, Boston, and Chicago twice each year; in Berlin, Brussels, and Paris once each year, and these performances are always outstanding sporting events, particularly in the case of the annual race at the Palais des Sports, Paris. It is confidently expected that Six Day Bicycle Races will prove among the most attractive features at the Westminster Stadium.

ICE HOCKEY.

Ice Hockey has often been described as the fastest and most thrilling team game in the world. It has made enormous strides in Europe in the last few years. The game has long had a following in Canada and the United States which are still the home of the best teams. Latterly, however, there has been a rapid development in the standard of play in Europe, and competition with representative Canadian and American teams for the Championship of the World is now keener than ever before.

Ice Hockey already commands an enthusiastic following in existing ice rinks in England, but none of those at

HUGHES'S NET WORK

AGAINST SUTTERTHE QUEEN WATCHES FIVE HOURS
OF TENNIS

London, July 1.

The Queen came to Wimbledon to-day and watched the play on the Centre Court for some considerable time. Beside her was seated King Alfonso, and there were also present the Earl of Athlone and Princess Alice and Rear-Admiral the Hon.
Sir Alexander and Lady Patricia Ramsay.

Her Majesty left at 7.30, having spent nearly five hours watching the tennis.

The Queen's visit brought luck to England, although she did not actually witness the most important and most admirable victory gained by an Englishman so far in the course of this week. For it was on Court No. 1 that C. Sutter, who was placed fifth in order of merit among the seeded players, and is ranked as America's third best man, was beaten by G.P. Hughes, who has proved a mainstay of Great Britain in Davis Cup doubles in partnership with F. J. Perry, but is ranked officially below Austin Perry, and Leo as a singles player and was not in consequence seeded.

I am told writes H. S. Scrivenor in the London Morning Post, that we do not know, or perhaps I ought to say have not seen, how good Sutter can be, that even when he beat von Cramm in that rousing match which they played on Thursday he was not at his best; but I believe that he and his country's other representatives were fairly confident of his ability to beat Hughes to-day.

RHYTHM.

He has nothing in the way of a forocious service; neither does he crack the ball, as Vines often does, so hard that you can almost hear it squelch; but he has learnt to perfection the art of hitting the ball quite reasonably hard and yet in such a rhythmical and easy fashion that his strokes are as sure as they are sovereign.

I think I may say at once that he had not this perfection of stroke-production at his command yesterday, and could not tackle his task with the confidence with which he is ordinarily endowed; but all the same infinite credit is due to Hughes for the persistent way in which he made him hustle, and for the many

Chinese Win
S'hai Tennis
LeagueKEEN STRUGGLE
IN DIV. 2

Shanghai, July 22.

With the first division Shanghai Lawn Tennis League championship now definitely decided in favour of the Chinese Tennis Club, interest is being centred on the race for the junior division title. By virtue of their overwhelming victory by 15 straight sets over the Association Sportif Francaise squad, the Shanghai Recreation Club seconders placed themselves into a fine position in the standings.

The Rees have won 69 and lost 21 sets and are only 10 sets behind the Cercle Sportif Francaise seconders, who have already played 120 sets to the Rees only 30.
The Russian Tennis Club, who have only joined the local tennis family this year, are also in a good position with 72 sets won and 48 lost. A hard fight will be staged by these three clubs in the next five weeks play terminating on August 23.

SENIOR LEAGUE TO END.
The senior division of the league is scheduled to be concluded next Wednesday and even if the Chinese drop all the 15 sets, to the French Club representatives, they will still be crowned champions for the first time. The Shanghai Cricket Club have concluded their schedule of 120 sets with an average of 74 wins and 46 losses and unless the Nagai Wata Kaisha win more than 13 sets or the Club Lusitano the whole 15, they will cede the second position, while a hard fight will be staged for the third place.

TO RECEIVE BONUS WHILST IN ENGLAND

London, July 10.

Members of the Australian Rugby League team, who left for England on July 4, will receive payment on a different basis from that of previous trips.

In addition to their allowance of £4 per week, payment will be on the basis of playing merit, attention to training, and conduct.

Points will be allotted by the team managers at the end of every match, and when the tour is concluded, there will be a statistical chart, which will reveal what bonus each player is to receive.

Points will be given on the following basis:

- (1) The way players train on ship en route to England.
- (2) The way players train during the intervals between each match.
- (3) Any assistance rendered by players acting as masseurs, not participating in a match.
- (4) Allowance to players for being on the winning side.

losing side, or for drawn games.
(5) Allowance to players who are ready to participate in fixtures, but are not displaying form sufficient to enable them to take actual part in the matches.

OVERCOME ANOMALIES.

The adoption of this new system of payment, it is claimed should tend to overcome many anomalies that have been obvious to managers during previous tours.
Almost every touring team develops its "tourists," yet at the end of an arduous tour, those players who have borne the heat and burden of the games have received no more compensation for their efforts than those players who have failed to attend to their training.
It is not always the players fault that he finds himself unable to reproduce the form that warranted his selection in the touring side; but this allowance will be made for this failure in the next touring team.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

"Love On Wheels" is coming on Sunday next to the King's Theatre, the Gainsborough picture, with Jack Hulbert putting across his famous grin and spontaneous fooling.

This film is something absolutely new in the way of entertainment. A quick-action comedy full of racy humour, and charming song numbers.

It is not difficult to imagine Jack Hulbert's comicalities when you think of him as a shop assistant in a big store, whose job is to be fired whenever a customer complains. He desires to get on in the world and one day, to the astonishment of the general manager, fires himself. The one-time shop assistant does eventually get a good position, but not before the employer has been treated to some very amusing incidents.

Gordon Harker has an important role in this film. He plays a conductor on a Green Line bus and his cockney humour gets full play.

"Song of the Eagle"

All the tremendously exciting events in the last twenty years are vividly pictured on the screen in a sweeping panorama of American life entitled "Song of the Eagle." Paramount's thundering epic of the American scene, which opens on Sunday at the Queen's Theatre.

A superb cast including such excellent players as Charles Bickford, Richard Arlen, May Brian, Jean Hermold, Louise Dresser, Andy Devine and George E. Stone, are featured under the direction of Ralph Murphy.

Two tremendous decades flash by depicting America's post-war inertia in the midst of prosperity and the heights to which this mighty nation rose during the depression. Here is an intrepid battle against the forces of evil and corruption as seen through the startled eyes of one average family—here too is a prognostication of the future, for the picture carries you up to the end of 1933.

"The Age of Consent"

Dorothy Wilson is making her debut in cinema in the "Age of Consent" at the Central Theatre.

Dorothy worked in the studio for two years. She was one of the prettiest girls on the lot. But if none of the directors ever thought of suggesting a screen test to Dorothy, she herself had even less interest in acting.

One afternoon, the Radio Pictures' production head finished reading the synopsis of "The Age of Consent" and requested the stenographic department for a complete script.

His mind was occupied with the story, his thoughts filled with the types which would best suit the roles of gay young college boys and girls. It was Dorothy who brought him his script, and a sudden hunch caused him to ask: Have you ever taken a screen test? Would you like to act?

Dorothy wasn't overthrilled. She was willing but not eager to be photographed and to have her voice recorded.

They gave her a script to read... the script which she almost knew by heart from having typed it several times. The test was taken, and Dorothy so impressed the boss she was signed for a term contract and given the lead in the college play as her first part.

"The Age of Consent" which is based on "Crossroads" a play by Martin Flavin, boasts of a cast composed of Eric Linden, Richard Cromwell, Arline Judge, John Halliday, Alleen Pringle and Rogina Barlow; Gregory La Cava directed.

"Strictly Personal"

Millions of lonely Americans find their only friends through the advertising columns of the papers published by the matrimonially inclined "Get-Together Clubs."

"Strictly Personal," B. P. Schulberg's new Paramount picture which commences to-day at the Queen's Theatre tells the inside story of these agencies to which swarms all the sex-starved, lonely spinsters, widows, widowers and bachelors who seek this means of relief from solitude.

The "Lonely Hearts" Club is a legitimate enterprise that sincerely tries to overcome its members' loneliness. Marjorie Rambeau and Edward Ellis, its proprietors, who investigate every applicant for membership, and turn down those whose motives are not for the best interests of all members, themselves get a vicarious joy in bringing happiness to those that trust them. With them is Dorothy Jordan, their ward.

An Eastern racketeer, played by Louis Calhern, forces them to make him a partner, turns the club into a rendezvous for those who ought to realize the blackmailing possibilities, and kills a widow member for her jewels. He tries to plant the crime on Ellis, attempts to abduct Dorothy Jordan, and is only stopped when Eddie Quillan, in the role of a wise-cracking reporter, learns of the plot.

"Wild Girl"

Filmed in one of the most impressive scenic spots of the West—the big trees of Sequoia National Park among the California Sierras—"Wild Girl" is said to offer breath-taking action. The grounds for its swift action, the new Fox picture, opens on the screen of the King's Theatre very shortly. Charles Farrell, Joan Bennett and Ralph Bellamy have the principal roles.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

YESTERDAY'S MARKET STEADY

According to Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz, the New York market was steady yesterday. Business done 2,040,000 shares. The Wall Street Journal reports: Stocks were generally firm but drifted somewhat during a rather dull session closing irregular within a narrow range due to reports that business is lowering off in several lines. "Ironage Magazine" reported steel production at 57% of capacity which indicates belated summer recession demand. The automobile industry is pressing for deliveries but placing little new business. Retail sales of automobiles are below those of June and further reduction is feared as a possibility due to the price of scrap, which is always a sensitive barometer, has risen to new highs for the year indicating the possibility that a rebound is anticipated in the early fall. Cable received at 11.40 p.m. during our Night Service from Swan, Culbertson & Fritz, New York. Stocks: List likely soon to develop a firmer tone, but now commitments should be on a conservative basis pending test of resistance ability. Cotton. Opened quiet and steady, looks like an irregular trading market for the time being. Wheat: Distress liquidation is now practically completed. New buyers are entering the market confidently. Crop news is deplorable. Spring wheat is beyond relief. Purchases on set-backs advised.

The splendid work being carried out by the Alice Memorial and Affiliated Hospitals, Hongkong, is evidenced in the statistics appearing in the report of the medical Superintendent, Dr. R. M. Gibson, for the past year, which show that there were 2,146 in-patients compared with 1,936 in 1931, while the total attendances of out-patients numbered 13,932.

The annual meeting of the Hospitals is to be held this afternoon when the Superintendent's report will be submitted for confirmation. In this report an interesting point is mentioned—that a protest should be raised against the custom of refusing to consult a doctor during Chinese New Year. "While it is true that the incidence of certain diseases is influenced by climatic conditions," says Dr. Gibson, "there is no evidence that for two weeks every year when Chinese New Year Festivities are held, the natural course of a disease is in any respects different from usual. And yet, as New Year approaches, patients who have been making good progress are taken out of hospital, others requiring treatment refuse to come to hospital, so that they may be in their own homes during the festivities. When the time during which it is unlucky to be seen by a doctor has passed, the clinics are again well attended. Referring only to prevalent condition, e.g., bronchopneumonia, acute septic disease of the hand, acute abdominal disease, neglect of early treatment is disastrous at any time of the year and the New Year does not confer any immunity. Many prejudices have been overcome and we look to those of influence to educate the people to realise that no days in the calendar are lucky or unlucky as regards the onset of disease and that even during Chinese New Year it is their duty to seek the advice of a doctor, when circumstances demand medical treatment."

The report adds that the antenatal and child welfare clinics in the Maternity Hospital are well attended and of considerable educational value. Suffering due to extreme poverty is most evident in the wards of the Ho Mui Ling Hospital for men. Many of the patients are labourers who, fearing absence from work would lose them their employment, struggle on while physically unfit.

The needs of a New Netherlands Hospital is still the most pressing problem, and unfortunately the committee is unable to go forward with the scheme for re-building as the Building Fund is only a third of the total amount required. During the past year there were 25 probationer nurses in training and it will be necessary to increase that number as soon as possible.

Grateful thanks are extended to all subscribers.

"SCOLDED" BY OFFICIAL RECEIVER

Protest by Manager of Knitting Factory

"You have been scolding me every day and have treated me worse than a prisoner," burst out Chin Tin-cho, of 21, Wyndham Street, when pressed by the Official Receiver, Mr. E. L. Agassiz, at the public examination of the Tai Hing Knitting Company this morning.

"I don't know about scolding you—you have been a lot of trouble," replied Mr. Agassiz. The Chief Justice (to Chin): You are here to answer questions and tell all you know.

Witness said he did not know anything about the knitting business or process but was made manager of the firm. The case was adjourned.

PETITION HELD OVER

BANKRUPTCY OF A PAWN SHOP

The hearing of a petition in bankruptcy of a Chinese partner in the Wing Sang Pawn Shop, of 37, Parkes Street, was stood over on the order of the Chief Justice this morning. When the next court sits only assets in the hands of the Official Receiver, and cash will be considered.

Debtor stated that his total liabilities were $9,600 and his assets $2,800, including his share and deposit in the pawn shop. He agreed that his account was overdrawn but said there was $500 due to him from last year's profits.

Mr. Agassiz said debtor had probably spent his share of the profits. The case was adjourned.

GARRISON SCHOOL PRIZEGIVING

AWARDS DISTRIBUTED BY MRS. BORRETT

The annual prizegiving of the Garrison Schools, Hongkong, took place this morning in the Volunteer Drill Hall, attended by the General Officer Commanding (Major-General O. C. Borrett), and Mrs. Borrett, who distributed the awards.

The annual school report was presented by Lieut-Col. G. T. Raikes, and at the conclusion of the prizegiving, the infants and elder children presented Mrs. Borrett and Mrs. Raikes with baskets of flowers.

The elder children's school rendered two songs creditably, while the infants gave three delightful recitations. A further feature of the occasion was a splendid display of handwork executed by the pupils during the year. This, particularly the infants' section, was much admired by parents and friends.

ANCESTORS!

Each Human Being Has 16,000,000,000,000,000,000

Prague. Each human being has 16,000,000,000,000,000,000 ancestors, if they could be traced back to the beginning of the Christian era—according to a Prague statistician. Here is his calculation:

First generation (you) 1
Second generation (your parents) 2
Third generation (your grandparents) 4
Fourth generation (great-grandparents) 8
Fifth generation 16
Sixth generation 32

By the 12th generation you will find yourself with 2,048 ancestors. You will then have got back to the early years of the 16th century. If you could continue the process back to the year A.D. 1, you would (says the statistician) find yourself with 16 trillion ancestors.

The statistician regrets the "sad ancestor loss" resulting from family inter-marriage. If a cousin marries a cousin, for instance, two grandparents are "lost" because husband and wife have them in common.—Reuter.

RECREIO AMATEUR PLAYERS

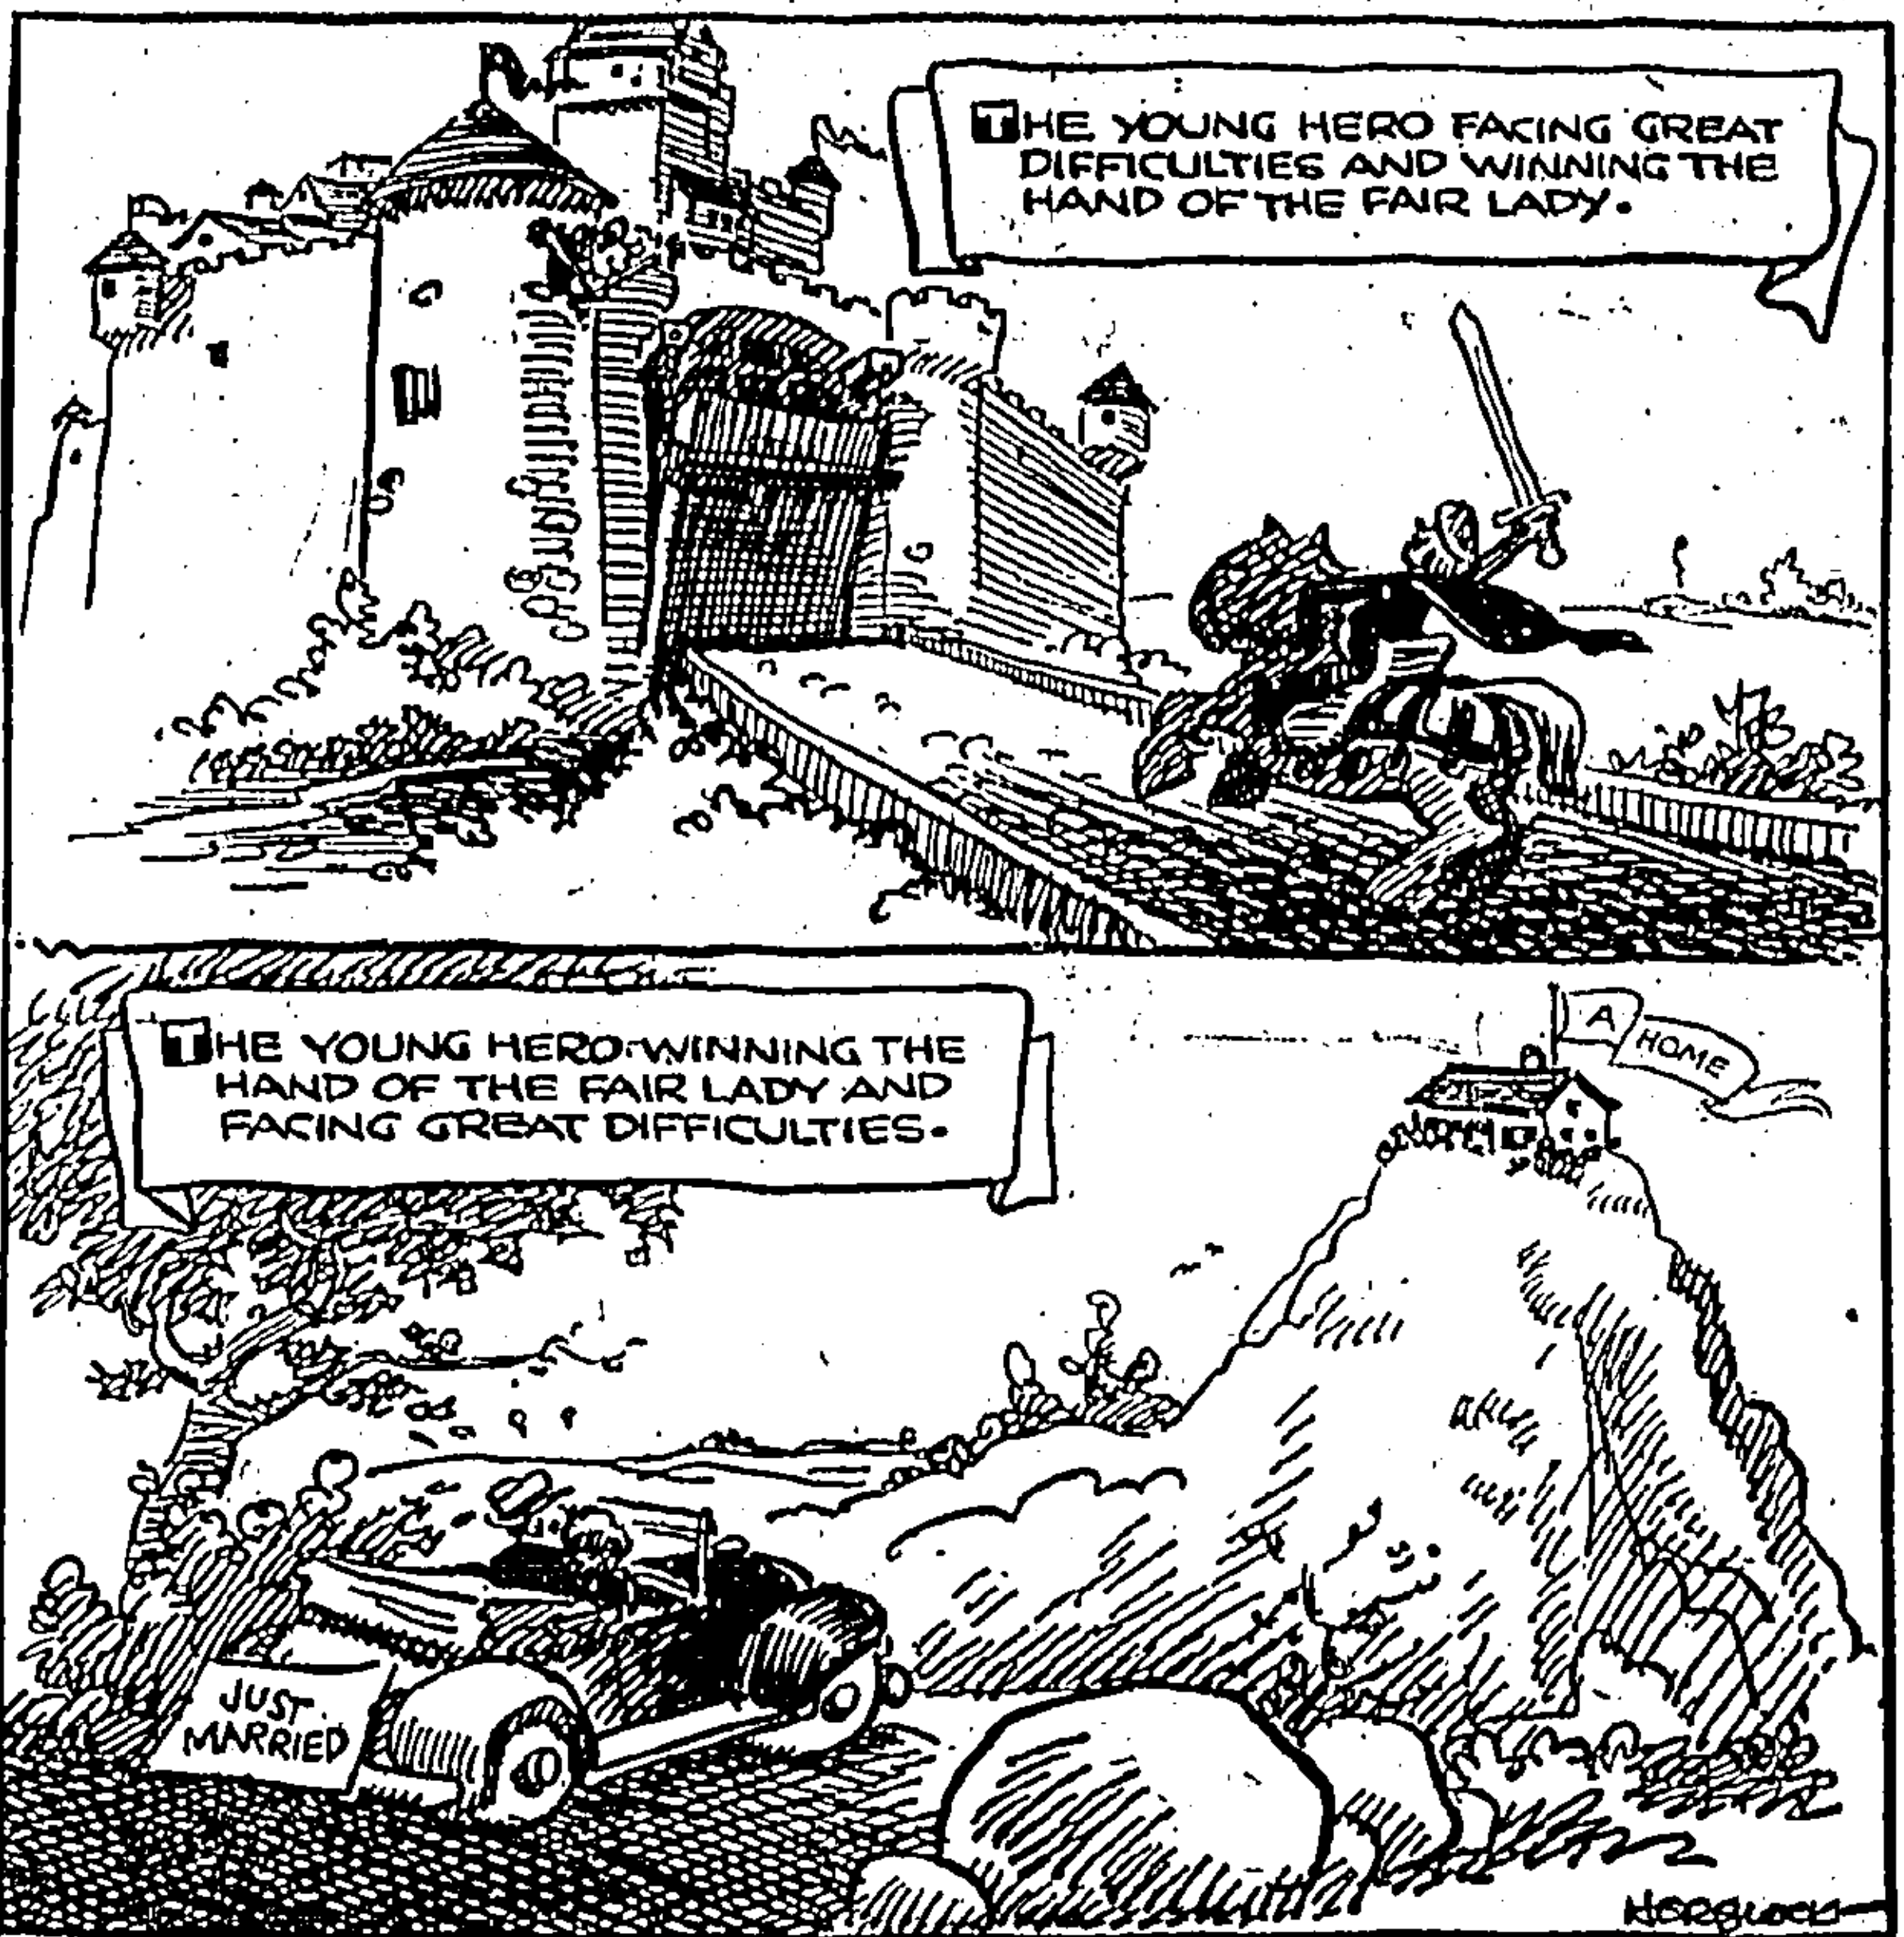

WORKING HARD ON MUSICAL SHOW

The Recreio Amateur Players, whose musical show is to be produced early next month are working hard to make the venture a success.

An extra large stage is being constructed for "Madame Jette," this being necessary by reason of the inclusion of such items as a Mannequin Parade and a Tango.

Perhaps the most attractive feature of this play will be the many songs from musical comedy hits which it carries. The success of these is assured by reason of the very capable hands into which the music has been entrusted. The orchestration, a task which is by no means easy has been ably undertaken by Mr. Eduardo Sequoia of the well-known Brunswick Dance Orchestra.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED A LITTLE

Tracking Down Human Ailments

NEW ELECTRICAL WONDER

Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Scientists have gone the old Scouts of the Wild West one better. They are literally "tracking down" many ailments by electrical "foot tracks" across a metal floor.

"The electric tracks" which not even Burnham's keen eye could have seen, represent a new development that can aid in the treatment of infantile paralysis, rheumatism, fractures involving the feet or legs, and various kinds of foot ailments and lameness. They were demonstrated recently before the American Medical Association.

They also can be "lie detectors" for unmasking cases of faked lameness.

The "electrical tracks" made possible for the first time an accurate study of walking gaits, they are made by an "electrobasograph" which records automatically just how a person's feet move and distribute weight on a floor.

TESTING A WALK.

When a person's gait is to be tested, electrical contact points are attached to soles of his shoes on the heels, the middle, outer edge of the sole, and under the great toe. Wires lead to a recording machine. As the patient walks along an aluminium covered board, a circuit is produced. Lights flash on diagrams of the soles of two feet on a screen, showing the physician just how the patient's soles are contacting the floor. At the same time automatic records are made of each step for future reference.

These records show just how different kinds of lameness or other ailment are affecting the gait, revealing the proper treatment to be used, and also serve as a check to indicate whether treatments are succeeding.

People who fake lameness in order to fraudulently collect compensation probably could be detected with the machine, said Dr. Schwartz because their imitation "lame" gait is never twice the same, whereas a person really lame always leaves the same kind of "electric tracks."—Reuter.

KHAKI UNIFORM TO RETURN

SOUTH AFRICA FALLS INTO LINE

Pretoria. The khaki uniform, abolished in South Africa in 1921, is to return. South African troops will, in the space of the next year, discard the present field grey uniforms, and return to drab or khaki. It is explained that the drab uniform has been adopted by practically all the troops of the world because of its service ability and that it is cheaper and more lasting than the field grey at present in use.—Reuter.

Women Not So Great As Men

—AT BRIDGE!

Cape Town. Women as a class are better bridge players than men, but the greatest players in the world are all men. The reason is simple—women have not the imagination or courage to be great players, but they know the methodical game better than men.

This is the opinion of Mr. Robert F. Foster, one of the world's greatest bridge authorities, who has arrived in South Africa from Australia on a lecture tour. Contract bridge he contends is far superior to auction. Auction players are as a rule nothing more than "card pushers," but contract is an intellectual game on par with chess.

"Contract bridge is no game for a coward," said Mr. Foster. "The main essentials for a good contract player are:

- (1) Interest in the game.
- (2) To regard it as an intellectual pastime and not to regard it as a source of amusement.
- (3) Attention to and concentration on the game.
- (4) Courage.

Mr. Foster introduced auction bridge to America in 1906 and it took him two years to make the Americans interested in the game. He has written over 60 books on Bridge, and is 70 years of age.—Reuter.

KOWLOON TONG TO HAVE NEW SCHOOL

AN EXPERIMENT

A new kindergarten, under the auspices of the Diocesan Girls' School, will be opened at Kowloon Tong on September 14. Interviewed yesterday, the headmistress of the parent school, Miss Sawyer, said that the opening of the kindergarten was in the nature of an experiment—to see if there was a need for such an institution among the children of outer Kowloon.

The kindergarten will be situated in Duke street, in the same building which will house the new Church of England at Kowloon Tong.

The number of pupils will necessarily be limited at the beginning. Miss Sawyer estimates that no more than 30 will be admitted during the first term. Ages of pupils will range from four to eight or nine years.

The kindergarten will be directly under the supervision of the senior school in Jordan Road, and the fees will be the same—$6 a month, payable quarterly, in advance. Since the first term will cover four months, the initial fee will be $24. Applications for admission may be made to Miss Sawyer after September 2, but any parents desirous of obtaining information before that date may apply to the secretary of the Diocesan Girls' School, the Rev. Walton Rogers, St. Andrew's Church, Kowloon.

A Real Need Visualised. "We hope to fill a real need among the children of Kowloon

GHOSTS OF THE PAST

DISCOVERY OF FOSSILS

EARLY AUSTRALIA

Sydney, N.S.W. Ghosts of Australia's prehistoric past are being unearthed in a bare, swampy patch at Cully Springs, near Brewarrina, N.S.W. where once monstrous creatures became bogged in the treacherous soil.

The first week's activities of the Australian Museum party, led by the Director of the Museum (Dr. Anderson) have yielded fossils which so far have been found to include leg, teeth, foot, and vertebrae bones of a diprotodon; the teeth and nearly complete jaw of a giant wombat, and the teeth of a lizard or goanna (Megalania), which in life appears to have been fully 17 ft long.

Several bird bones which have been unearthed "probably" are the relics of extinct forms of life.

The party, after pitching tents on the site, 14 miles south-east of Brewarrina, sank eight shafts, and linked them with communication trenches. Most of the bones were found at a depth of roughly 5½ ft. in a fairly compact layer of dry clay, contrasting with the almost glue-like surface, which imposed heavy labour on the digging party.

FIRST DISCOVERY.

The first discovery, made by Dr. Anderson, who himself was wielding a spade, caused an excited pause in operations. It was a fine, big bone—of an ox!

The distinction between the bones of existing animals such as this and prehistoric remains is quickly made by trained eyes, and so the digging was resumed.

Dr. Anderson returned to Sydney, leaving the remainder of the party on the spot, with the understanding that he will go back in the event of important developments.

He is very appreciative of the fact that the Yeomans brothers, of Gilgoin Station, though they have disposed of land around the patch, have held that particular portion for scientific investigation.—Reuter.

Tong," said Miss Sawyer. "The Catholic children are already catered for by the Maryknoll Convent. Of course, it is not in any spirit of rivalry that the new school is being opened. I am sure we will work together in harmonious co-operation. As I said before, the opening of the kindergarten is in the nature of an experiment. If we find there is an insufficient demand for the new school, it will be closed down, but we are prepared to see if a need exists. Personally, I think it does."

Referring to the Diocesan Girls' School in Jordan Road, which re-opens on September 12, Miss Sawyer said that it was already packed to its capacity. A few children from the Kowloon Tong area were now attending the kindergarten there, and she hoped, when the new school was opened, they would transfer to it, thus relieving the pressure at the Jordan Road School.

THROUGH THE LIBYAN DESERT

TREKKER DESCRIBES EXPERIENCES

SAND BLAST KILLS TREES

London. "A small forest, 5 miles wide, of dead trees whose trunks, 10 to 12 inches in diameter, had been cut off at ground level by a sand blast and lay strewn about over the sand."

This is one of the many interesting things about the Libyan desert described by Major R. A. Bagnold in a lecture to the Royal Geographical Society.

Describing his experiences in this drought ridden desert where "rain falls too seldom in any one place to support permanent vegetation other than an occasional plant of the specialized drought-proof variety," Major Bagnold said:

"The whole area is almost uniform in character. With the notable exception of 'Uvalat' there are no mountains worthy of the name, the surface consisting of gently tilted flats of bare rock, gravel, or sand, with low hills, falling steeply to lower levels by scarps sometimes over 1,000 feet in height."

"Scattered at intervals of several hundred miles lie the oases—depressions, usually surrounded by cliffs, and deep enough to penetrate to the level of the artesian water which is the only permanent source of supply in the country."

5,000 MILES BY CAR.

The eight members of the party travelled in four cars over more than 5,000 miles of new country where there were no tracks at all to guide them and where, at times, motoring became terribly monotonous and it was hard to keep awake.

Major Bagnold described how at one point they came upon a mud hollow containing two large clumps of green trees, covering some 50 acres. They thought at first that it was an oasis. But there was no water and everything else was dead. The ground, however, was "nearly white with the little shells of one particular kind of freshwater shell-fish"—showing that at some time, not far distant, the area must have been a lake.

"Fresh, green rain-given vegetation" was sighted for the first time a month after they had left the Nile—when they had travelled over 3,000 miles!

OSTRICH'S NEST.

Further on, in a clump of trees growing in a mud pan surrounded by sand at an altitude of 2,900, they came upon an ostrich's nest.

"The nest consisted of 94 eggs arranged in a circle about 12 feet across, and a central clutch of some twenty eggs upon which a bird was sitting."

"This," added Major Bagnold, "was the only big nest we saw, but its size cannot be exceptional, for we saw later a pair of birds with a brood of more than fifty young chicks all about the same size."

Another curious spot was discovered by the expedition at the end of a two-days' journey through "seemingly endless miles" of "heskanit" grass—and after frequent stops to clear the seats of the cars of burrs and to extract their bundles of tiny needles from their clothes and bodies.

CRATER OF MALHA.

It was the crater of Malha, rising less than 100 feet above the parched brown plain on the western edge of the Meidob Hills. All around there was practically no sign of human occupation.

The sudden view down into the interior was, then, all the more astonishing.

"When we saw it," said Major Bagnold, "the whole of the bottom of the great pit, about a quarter of a mile across, was swarming with men, women, and children, and their cattle watering at the many springs."

"The final explosion of the crater has left the level of the pit bottom well below that of the underground water-level here, so that a circle of fresh water springs surrounds and drains into the central lake."—Reuter.

Nanking, July 26.
On the heels of the announcement that France has laid claim to nine islands in the China Sea and that Japan is seriously considering contesting the French right of occupation, China is advancing the argument of sovereignty on her own behalf. The dispute over ownership of the territories has now assumed three-sided proportions.

Official circles here have expressed surprise at the official announcement from Paris yesterday confirming the French occupation of the little coral isles, which lie between Borneo and the Philippines. The islands are known in Chinese as the Sisha Group and are populated for the most part by Chinese fishermen. They have always been considered here as being under Chinese sovereignty.

The Ministries of Foreign Affairs and the Navy are jointly studying the matter before taking diplomatic action.—Reuter.

"No, sir."
"He said he would." The old doctor tapped his teeth with a pencil. "What's the matter with him these days, anyway? He doesn't know whether he's a foot or a horseback."

Monnie shrugged, trying to look detached.

"Ah, there he comes now!" Dr. Waterman struggled to his feet, his great bulk blocking her view of the window.

"Well, I'm too busy to see him now. Make him wait. Let him come in in 15 minutes. Do him good to cool his heels."

The door to his private office slammed. Monnie waited for Charles' ring, her heart beating faster. Why had the doctor so deliberately left them alone together?

10,000 HEROIN PILLS

GIRL DISCOVERED WITH HOARD

A night raid carried out by the Mongkok Police on July 25 had a sequel at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning when a young woman, Nui Yuet-ngan, was charged before Mr. Butters with unlawful possession of 10,000 heroin pills at No. 549 Shanghai Street.

Sergeant Lamont stated that when the raid was made defendant was not on the premises, but she was sent for. When she returned she produced keys and opened two suitcases in which the pills were found. Two tins of opium were also found on the premises.

Pleading guilty to possession, defendant told the Court that a friend of hers had left the suitcases in her cubicle and had gone away.

A fine of $2,000 or eight months was imposed on the first charge and $200 or six weeks on the opium charge.

WORLD'S LARGEST DOCK

DECLARED OPEN BY KING

HIS MAJESTY'S SPEECH

London, July 26.

The King opened the world's largest graving dock at Southampton to-day. The Queen, and the Duke, and Duchess of York accompanied him in the Royal Yacht "Victoria and Albert" whose bows broke a red, white and blue ribbon across the entrance as it entered the flower strewn waters of the dock to the accompaniment of cheering crowds and the music of massed bands, while overhead aeroplanes circled.

In declaring the dock open, the King expressed special satisfaction in inaugurating such a splendid addition to the dock system of the port.

GOOD AUGURY.

"It is as true to-day as ever, that the welfare of this country is largely bound by the prosperity of seaborne traffic. Realising the vital need for efficiency in our ports, and in all other requirements of our merchant navy, I took upon the opening of this, the largest graving dock in world, as a good augury for the future of Southampton." The Queen christened the dock by pouring a jar of Empire wine from a silver cup.—British Wireless.

AIR ARMADA IN NEWFOUNDLAND

ONE MACHINE MAKES FORCED LANDING

New York, July 26.

Twenty-three planes of the Italian air armada have arrived safely at Shoal Harbour, Newfoundland.

The twenty-fourth was compelled to make a forced landing near Cape Traverse, Prince Edward Island. It alighted on the water safely and will join the remainder of the fleet when the defect has been rectified.

LEAVING FOR IRELAND.

New York, July 26.

General Balbo and his Italian air armada have decided to begin the return flight to Italy. The aeroplanes leave to-morrow by the Northern route, via Ireland.—Reuter.

NO PERMANENT TREATY. YET

BETWEEN BRITAIN AND SOVIET

London, July 26.

Replying to a question in Parliament Capt. Anthony Eden said no discussions for a permanent treaty, as distinct from a trade agreement, were in progress at the present time between Britain and the Soviet Governments.

Whether they were likely to take place depended on various circumstances including the Soviet attitude towards debts and claims.—British Wireless.

JUNK CAPSIZES CHILDREN CLING TO TIP-OF MAST

But for the timely arrival of No. 3 Police Launch a whole Chinese family, comprising the parents and their three children, aged four, six and twelve, would have been drowned when the flailing junk on which they were living capsized in West Lamma Channel yesterday afternoon. Shortly after 8 o'clock the junk was proceeding along Lamma

Channel, it heeled over without apparent reason and capsized. The family was thrown into the water but luckily the junk righted itself on the bed of the channel with the mast top showing above water so that the occupants were able to hold on to that until help arrived.

After almost an hour of agonising suspense the Police launch was sighted and hailed. The family was taken aboard in a somewhat exhausted condition and brought to Kowloon.
